3 MEN DROP 200 FEET TO DEATH DOWN SHAFT

Death Toll in Maybach Coal Mine Nears 95

SLIGHT HOPE FOR 17 OF THE INJURED MEN

RESCUE PARTIES DESCRIBE THE HORRIFYING SCENES WITNESSED

EXPLOSION IS SECOND DISASTER IN GERMAN MINES WITHIN LESS THAN WEEK

Friedrichstahl, Germany, Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—The toll of death in the Maybach mine disaster — second in Germany within a week — was increased today to 95, with five missing men believed dead in the wreckage.

Engineers reported the explosion occurred in a little-used gallery 1,800 feet underground where an electric spark probably ignited coal dust. The spark might have been caused by a pick-axe or a hand-car brake, they said. Mine officials denied rumors that gasoline had been found in a place indicating a criminal act.

The victims probably will be buried in a common grave on Wednesday.

Friedrichstahl, Germany, Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—The death toll in the explosion which wrecked the Maybach coal mine near here Saturday stood at 93 today. Six men still were missing after 84 bodies had been recovered and three injured miners had died in a hospital.

Slight hope was held for 17 of the other 23 miners injured in the blast. The explosion was the second disaster in German mines within less than a week. The Wilhelm pit of the Anna mine at Alsdorf was wrecked by a blast which killed 262 miners on Oct. 21.

Rescue parties described horrifying scenes within the Maybach mine. Bodies were thrown into heaps by the blast and many of them were rendered unrecognizable. Fire added to the horror of the catastrophe. Searchers groping through the wreckage heard feeble cries of "Comrades, save me," and discovered three miners still alive, but terribly disfigured.

Officials of the mine credited the quick action of Chief Bellan preventing a larger number of casualties. He descended the mine shaft alone and succeeded in partially preventing the spread of the fire until assistance arrived.

No official explanation for the blast has been determined.

SUFFERING DUE TO STATUS UNEMPLOYMENT

NOTICEABLE IN SOME LARGE INDUSTRIAL CENTERS

"NO ONE IS GOING TO FREEZE OR STARVE TO DEATH"

Washington, Oct. 27.—Human suffering due to the unemployment situation has been noted in some large industrial centers, but "no one is going to freeze or starve to death this winter," President Hoover was informed today by Allan Burns, executive director of the National Association of Community Chest and Councils.

Burns was called to the White House by Mr. Hoover after a tour of the country analyzing unemployment conditions and the need of relief.

FLOYD SIMPSON GETS HIS FILL OF PRUNES

Chicago, Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—Floyd Simpson, 15-year-old negro of Lovejoy, Ill., used to like prunes "better'n anything," but now he never wants to see another one as long as he lives.

He said so himself after a Chicago and Alton railroad brakeman released him from a sealed boxcar in which Floyd had been imprisoned for five days with nothing to eat but prunes. He had sneaked into the car near Cairo, Ill., and been locked in before he had a chance to eat all he wanted. Five days with nothing to eat but his favorite food was enough, however, even for Floyd, and his first remark upon stepping from the car was "Boss, I wants no more prunes."

TEMPERATURES ABOVE FREEZING

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—Temperatures throughout the northwest were well above freezing today, the U. S. weather bureau reported. Rain in Wisconsin and scattered North Dakota and Montana points aided late pastureage, according to agricultural observers. The forecast for tomorrow was "fair tonight and Tuesday, cooler."

'OLD MAN GLOOM' TO BE BURNED AT THE STAKE

Little Falls, Minn., Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—Condemned to death by the local vigilance committee, "Old Man Gloom" will be burned at the stake Halloween night in Morrison county's biggest bonfire.

Convinced that "gloom" was a general nuisance and was delaying the return of prosperity, local merchants put the "old man" on trial and sentenced him to death.

The return of optimism in business was decreed by the court which ordered all storekeepers and citizens to gather Friday night and watch the burning of the funeral pyre.

H. P. WHITNEY, MILLIONAIRE, SPORTSMAN, DIES

CAUGHT SLIGHT COLD WITH FEVER, WHICH TURNED INTO PNEUMONIA

HIS WIFE, A SCULPTRESS OF NOTE, AND CHILDREN WITH HIM WHEN HE DIED

New York, Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—Harry Payne Whitney, 58, multi-millionaire sportsman and financier, died of pneumonia last night at his Fifth Avenue home.

From his secretary it was learned that Whitney caught a slight cold with fever last Tuesday. It was not considered serious, but pneumonia developed.

Mrs. Whitney, the former Gertrude Vanderbilt, a sculptress of note, and their three children were with him when he died.

Harry Payne Whitney, one of the richest men in America, was the son of William C. Whitney, secretary of navy in the cabinet of President Grover Cleveland, and Flora Payne Whitney. He was born April 29, 1872, in New York. He attended Yale University, from which institution he was graduated in 1894.

Although he inherited from his father one of the country's greatest fortunes—estimated at $200,000,000—Whitney was known particularly for his activities in the field of sports.

He was an expert poloist, a member of the "Big Four" of 1908 that brought to America from England the international polo cup and established the reputation of the United States in that sport. He was one of the few players in polo history to hold the maximum handicap to ten goals.

Whitney also maintained a big stable of racing thoroughbreds which won at various times the Pimlico, Preakness, the Kentucky Derby and other important races. His most noted horses were Irish Lad, Regret and Whiskery. In 1924 Whitney's horses won a total of $500,000, more than any other stable that year.

"BUGS" MORAN IN JAIL AGAIN

GANGSTER LEADER ARRESTED IN HIS HIDEOUT NEAR WAUKEGAN, ILL.

Waukegan, Ill., Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—George "Bugs" Moran, only surviving leader of the once notorious Moran-Aiello-Zuta northside gang, was in jail again today while plans were being completed to bury Joe Aiello, his one time ally who was riddled by machine gun bullets believed fired at the order of the south side's most powerful gangster, Scarface Al Capone.

While Aiello's body lay in a $11,200 casket in his home, Moran was rearrested in his hideout near here. He was charged with conspiracy to defeat justice and vagrancy, and threatened with an additional contempt of court charge if he remonstrated. He was arrested in the hideout last week on vagrancy charges, but was released on bond, and objected when rearrested that he was being placed under "double jeopardy or something like that."

Attired in gaudy pajamas, Moran was lying on a bed reading newspaper accounts of Aiello's slaying when he was arrested.

"You're going to be arrested every time we find you in this county and you're not going to make this your battle-ground," State's Attorney A. V. Smith told Moran.

"What do you know about the murder of Joe Aiello?" Smith asked.

"That double crosser?" Moran inquired. "I haven't seen him for eight months. I haven't been in the racket for four years. I'm a respectable guy."

Disturbances Break Out in Rio De Janeiro Military Group Attempts a Counter Revolt

MOVEMENT IS LED BY THE FIRST CAVALRY REGIMENT

SIXTH INFANTRY AND MILITARY POLICE JOIN IN THE UPRISING

MILITARY JUNTA TAKES RIGOROUS STEPS TO QUEL REVOLUTION

By C. A. POWELL

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rio De Janeiro, Oct. 27.—Disturbances broke out in the capital today when a military group attempted a counter-revolution against the provisional government which overthrew the Washington Luis regime last week.

The movement was led by the first cavalry regiment, the sixth infantry and military police, it was reported.

The military junta which controls the temporary government took rigorous steps to quell the revolt. Col. Figueira De Mello was taken prisoner.

A similar movement was reported to have been started in Sao Paulo.

Great confusion prevailed in the capital. Banks and stores closed and shuttered their windows. Thousands forsook their normal activities and hastened to their homes for safety.

The counter-revolution was started shortly before 11 A. M. by military police in the Plaza Republica. An hour later it was announced that the military junta had successfully put down the revolt, for the present at least.

When the movement was started in the Plaza Republica here, the military police, cavalry and infantry men involved arrested all their officers who refused to join, including Col. Bandeira De Mello who was imprisoned in the firemen's headquarters.

The master of the German steamship Baden, Capt. Rolin, was scheduled to board his ship and leave for Buenos Aires late today. The German minister said Rolin never had been a prisoner but was detained for questioning for two hours Saturday after his ship had been fired upon.

Rio De Janeiro, Oct. 27.—Dr. Getulio Vargas, denied the presidency of Brazil by election, was expected to assume that office today with the support of the revolutionists who ousted Dr. Washington Luis.

The provisional government of Gen. Augusto Tasso Fragoso and other military leaders who took command of the capital, turned to Dr. Vargas as the logical man to restore order in Brazil after a month of civil war, and invited him to accept the presidency.

Vargas had the support of General Juarez Tavora, youthful leader of the revolt in northern Brazil, who had refused to recognize the provisional government. He declared that it had been formed at the 11th hour by elements foreign to the revolution, and said that other revolutionary chiefs would not accept its authority.

Hostilities were ended throughout the country, with the possible exception of Sao Paulo, the home of Washington Luis and President-elect Julio Prestes, where it was reported without confirmation that plans for a counter-revolution had been discovered.

The report that Dr. Prestes had disappeared was considered in some quarters as meaning that he had retired until his supporters could organize a movement against the successful revolutionists.

Vargas was understood to be enroute to the federal capital. It was said his troops were preparing for an advance

2 SUSPECTS IN WEBSTER BANK ROBBERY TAKEN

POSSES ORGANIZED BY MIDDLE AGED WOMAN CONSTABLE

MORE THAN $5,000 FOUND IN BANDITS' RETREAT IN WOODS NEAR HINCKLEY

Pine City, Minn., Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—Captured by posses organized by a middle aged woman constable, two suspects in the Webster, Wis., bank robbery today were to face recent bank robbery victims in the northwest.

The two gave their names as Leonard McCarthy, Milwaukee, Wis., and Joe Miller, who admitted he had served a sentence at the Auburn, N. Y., penitentiary.

Possemen found more than $5,000 in the bandits' retreat in woods near Hinckley, Minn., although the pair were believed to have taken little more than $2,000 from the Burnett County State Bank at Webster.

The money lead Mrs. Gordon Thompson, 45, constable of Clover township, to believe the men might be implicated with robberies recently at Delhi, Montgomery and Meriden.

Mrs. Thompson and her son, Orville, 21, blockaded the highway when they received word Saturday of the Webster bank robbery. When the two men leaped from their automobile and fled to the woods, Mrs. Thompson organized posses and surrounded the pair. They were found in their cabin Sunday and taken to the county jail here.

on Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo, when the provisional government asked him to become president.

Washington Luis remained a prisoner in Copacabana fortress, reportedly still refusing to sign his resignation. He passed his 60th birthday yesterday behind the bleak walls of the fortification, instead of in the sumptuous surroundings of the Catete Palace, as he had planned. It was a sad anniversary for the veteran statesman, who had served his country for more than three decades.

EARL L. YOCUM, GALVA CITIZEN, MISSING TODAY

ONE OF RICHEST CITIZENS IN ILLINOIS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN KIDNAPED

WIFE OVERHEARD CONVERSATION OF STRANGER WITH HER HUSBAND

Galva, Ill., Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—Earl L. Yocum, Galva's richest citizen and said to be one of the wealthiest bankers in west central Illinois, was missing today and it was believed he was held a captive by kidnapers who wanted ransom.

The banker, authorities believed, was kidnaped from his own front yard by men whom he tried to befriend by showing them the way to a home they pretended they wished to visit.

"Where is the home of . . . ?" Mrs. Yocum, the banker's wife, heard a stranger ask of her husband Saturday night as Yocum entered his front yard after taking his two children, Mary, 13, and Ann, 8, to a moving picture theater. Mrs. Yocum said she did not hear the last word of the stranger's query, but she did hear her husband answer, "Right over there."

The stranger, she said, then asked Yocum, who is president of the Yocum State bank of Galva, if he would show him the way. Yocum replied "sure" and strolled away.

An hour passed. Yocum did not return. His wife became worried and attempted to telephone to neighbors. Getting no response, she investigated and found that the telephone wires had been cut outside the house. Police were called, posses formed and the search began.

Word from the state bank examiner's office at Springfield was that Yocum's bank was in excellent condition. Yocum was said here to be worth more than $1,000,000. He is known by bankers throughout the state.

No demand for ransom was reported, but officials felt certain that such a demand had been received by Mrs. Yocum, who was suffering severely from nervousness and fear.

Officials said a special delivery letter, which came into Galva on an east bound train, was delivered to the banker's wife Sunday afternoon. She refused to divulge its contents. Authorities felt certain the letter contained threats and a demand for money or that it had been written by Yocum and directed how ransom was to be turned over secretly to the abductors.

It was recalled that a wealthy Peoria, Ill. citizen was kidnaped only a few months ago and held captive near Chicago for five days.

FARM BOARD WILL NOT DUMP WHEAT

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, today assured wheat dealers here that the farm board will not dump the millions of bushels it bought last spring in an effort to stabilize the market.

"There will be no wheat dumping," the secretary said. "The farm board will not sell at a loss or try to compete with the present market. When the price is right, the board will sell gradually. It will not flood the market or increase the present surplus."

TRIO ENGAGED REPAIRING SHAFT AT LOUISE MINE

CABLE CAR SENT DOWN RECOVERERS MANGLED BODIES AT CUYUNA RANGE MINE

CAUSE OF ACCIDENT BLAMED BY INSPECTOR ON FAULTY CABLE

Plunged 200 feet to the bottom of a mine shaft they were repairing, three men today were killed instantly in the Louise mine of the Manganiferous Ore Co., near Ironton.

They were Frank Mesner, Oscar Backstrom and Henry Fageros, all of Crosby.

The men were on a skip making repairs to the sides of the shaft when the cable to which the skip was attached suddenly parted and the men dropped to their deaths.

The shaft was not damaged by the accident and a cable car was sent down immediately and recovered the bodies.

Mesner and Fageros are each survived by wives and families of three children. Backstrom leaves a widow.

Reginald Nowell, county mining inspector, conducted an investigation immediately after the accident which occurred at 8 A. M. He said that he would report to the Minnesota Industrial Commission that the accident was caused by a cable in bad condition. He said that another investigation may be conducted.

The last fatality occurred at the Cuyuna Range mines last June when the body of John O. Jonavich was found lying underground in a drift at Armour No. 1. The cause of death in his case was reported unknown since there were no marks of accident or violence on his body.

POLITICAL CANDIDATES IN LAST DRIVE

BY RADIO, PERSONAL APPEAL AND PREPARED STATEMENTS IN LAST STAND

EACH MANAGER PREDICTS VICTORY FOR HIS OWN CANDIDATE

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—By radio, personal and prepared statement, major political candidates today drove on toward election while each campaign manager prophesied victory for his own candidate.

Candidates, managers and political observers agreed on one point—that the turn of the election hinged on the vote of the Twin Cities.

In an effort to solidify that vote, dozens of radio talks will be made during the week by candidates and prominent party members. A daily radio talk will be made by Einar Holstad, democratic senatorial candidate, and a daily talk in behalf of Senator Thomas D. Schall, his republican opponent is scheduled.

Tom Davis, Minneapolis attorney, former Governor J. A. Burnquist and I. K. Lewis, Duluth, will speak for Schall.

Floyd B. Olson, farmer-labor candidate for governor, will speak daily over the radio as well as addressing a number of political meetings.

Ray P. Chase, republican gubernatorial candidate, and Ernest Lundeen, farmer-labor senatorial candidate, continued to "stump" the state.

Chase was to talk at Duluth tonight and has carried his campaign cavalcade into northern counties for a final windup. During most of the week he will continue his intensive personal speaking tour through new territory.

Lundeen, accompanied by Victor E. Lawson, state senator and publisher of the Willmar Daily Tribune, and Knud Wefald, congressional candidate, was to speak a score of times today and tomorrow in the ninth district.

Mrs. Yocum said she did not hear the last word of the stranger's query, but she did hear her husband answer, "Right over there."

The stranger, she said, then asked Yocum, who is president of the Yocum State bank of Galva, if he would show him the way. Yocum replied "Sure" and stroled away.

An hour passed. Yocum did not return. His wife became worried and attempted to telephone to neighbors. Getting no response, she investigated and found that the telephone wires had been cut outside the house. Police were called, posses formed and the search began.

Today no trace of the banker had been found.

Word from the state bank examiner's office at Springfield was that Yocum's bank was in excellent condition. Yocum was said here to be worth more than $1,000,000. He is known by bankers throughout the state.

No demand for ransom was reported, but officials felt certain that such a demand had been received by Yocum, who was suffering severely from nervousness and fear.

Officials said a special delivery letter, which came into Galva on an east bound train, was delivered to the banker's wife Sunday afternoon. She refused to divulge its contents. Authorities felt certain the letter contained threats and a demand for money or that it had been written by Yocum and directed how ransom was to be turned over secretly to the abductors.

It was recalled that a wealthy Peoria, Ill., citizen was kidnaped only a few months ago and held captive near Chicago for five days.

FARM BOARD WILL NOT DUMP WHEAT

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, today assured wheat dealers here the farm board will not dump the millions of bushels it bought last spring in an effort to stabilize the market.

"There will be no wheat dumping," the secretary said. "The farm board will not sell at a loss or try to compete with the present market. When the price is right, the board will sell gradually. It will not flood the market or increase the present surplus."

TRIO ENGAGED REPAIRING SHAFT AT LOUISE MINE

CABLE CAR SENT DOWN RECOVERERS MANGLED BODIES AT CUYUNA RANGE MINE

CAUSE OF ACCIDENT BLAMED BY INSPECTOR ON FAULTY CABLE

Plunged 200 feet to the bottom of a mine shaft they were repairing, three men today were killed instantly in the Louise mine of the Manganiferous Ore Co., near Ironton.

They were Frank Mesner, Oscar Backstrom and Henry Fageroos, all of Crosby.

The men were on a skip making repairs to the sides of the shaft when the cable to which the skip was attached suddenly parted and the men dropped to their deaths.

The shaft was not damaged by the accident and a cable car was sent down immediately and recovered the bodies.

Mesner and Fageroos are each survived by wives and families of three children. Backstrom leaves a widow.

Reginald Nowell, county mining inspector, conducted an investigation immediately after the accident which occurred at 8 A. M. He said that he would report to the Minnesota Industrial Commission that the accident was caused by a cable in bad condition. He said that another investigation may be conducted.

The last fatality occurred at the Cuyuna Range mines last June when the body of John O. Jonavich was found lying underground in a drift at Armour No. 1. The cause of death in his case was reported unknown since there were no marks of accident or violence on his body.

POLITICAL CANDIDATES IN LAST DRIVE

BY RADIO, PERSONAL APPEAL AND PREPARED STATEMENTS IN LAST STAND

EACH MANAGER PREDICTS VICTORY FOR HIS OWN CANDIDATE

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—By radio, personal and prepared statement, major political candidates today drove on toward election while each campaign manager prophesied victory for his own candidate.

Candidates, managers and political observers agreed on one point—that the turn of the election hinged on the vote of the Twin Cities.

In an effort to solidify that vote, dozens of radio talks will be made during the week by candidates and prominent party members. A daily radio talk will be made by Einar Holmale, democratic senatorial candidate, and a daily talk in behalf of Senator Thomas D. Schall, his republican opponent is scheduled.

Tom Davis, Minneapolis attorney, former Governor J. A. Burnquist and I. K. Lewis, Duluth, will speak for Schall.

Floyd B. Olson, farmer-labor candidate for governor, will speak daily over the radio as well as addressing a number of political meetings.

Ray P. Chase, republican gubernatorial candidate, and Ernest Lundeen, farmer-labor senatorial candidate, continued to "stump" the state.

Chase was to talk at Duluth tonight and has carried his campaign cavalcade into northern counties for a final windup. During most of the week he will continue his intensive personal speaking tour through new territory.

Lundeen, accompanied by Victor E. Lawson, state senator and publisher of the Willmar Daily Tribune, and Knud Wefald, congressional candidate, was to speak a score of times today and tomorrow in the ninth district.

GUN SQUAD STOPS A STREET FIGHT

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(U.P.)—A gun squad stopped a street fight today and found they had foiled a holdup.

Harry Dean was arrested when Arthur Edwards, colored, said Dean robbed him of $1.

A revolver, discarded by one of the men, when the police arrived, was found behind a billboard.

How Islands Got Name

If you think the Canary islands were so named because the trees were full of yellow songsters, guess again. Large numbers of dogs roaming around caused King Juba II of the Mauretanias, who discovered the islands, to take the Latin name "canaries," meaning "dogs" and bestow it on the place.—Exchange.

EMERGENCY COMMITTEE FUNCTIONING

PANORAMA OF WORLD-WIDE DEPRESSION RELIEVED BY FLASHES OF OPTIMISM

NATIONAL BUSINESS SURVEY CONFERENCE REPORTS ON CONDITIONS

By LYLE C. WILSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, Oct. 27.—While the work of President Hoover's emergency committee on employment gathered momentum today, the country was presented with a panorama of world-wide depression, relieved by several factors of optimism, in a comprehensive report of the National Business Survey Conference.

The report was made by Julius Barnes, chairman of the conference. Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the emergency employment committee, spent a busy week-end in New York. He expected to return here tomorrow night after further conferences with business leaders and more speeches similar to the radio address last night in which he urged all Americans to work together toward a solution of the unemployment situation.

Senator Glenn, republican, Illinois, a member of the appropriations committee, has returned to Washington to begin work on matters affecting unemployment to be put before the approaching session of congress. He conferred with President Hoover and department heads and said efforts undoubtedly would be made to enlarge the $115,000,000 fund for public building.

"The ways in which the people of the country as householders and home owners can help are to spruce up our homes, make the repairs that are needed, do that little job of painting we thought about so long, fix up the odd corners of the yard, replace worn-out or broken parts that halt the smooth running of the household," Woods said in the radio speech.

The factors in the situation obviously considered optimistic by Barnes were the large capital sums provided for productive purposes in 1930 and improvement in prices of raw materials.

Otherwise the report presented a generally gloomy reflection of conditions here and abroad, conspicuously favored in the midst of deflation where those whose income is derived from radio advertising. Magazines fared next best and newspapers were third and last in the field.

Meanwhile, Fred C. Croxton, federal unemployment advisor for the mid-western states, announced here he would leave tomorrow night for Columbus, Ohio, to begin his work. The announcement followed a conference with commerce department officials.

Croxton was appointed last week by Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the president's emergency committee on employment, as regional advisor to co-operate with state and city officials in the midwest. He will be accompanied to Columbus by Dr. John M. Gries, commerce department construction expert.

Burns reported to Mr. Hoover that community chests operating in 220 cities are trying to raise $55,000,000 to meet conditions expected this winter. This amount is seven per cent more than was collected last year, but collections thus far are much better than ever before, Burns said.

"This money, used in connection with other relief work, will be sufficient to prevent any fatal consequences of suffering," Burns added. He said he believed Detroit was the hardest hit of all American cities, with Cleveland and Toledo probably next. The Pacific coast and south thus far have fared much better than the industrial east and middle west, he said.

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(UP)—Admiral Robert E. Coontz, retired, reviewed navy units and troops at Fort Snelling today as part of the Twin Cities' Navy day celebration.

The former commander-in-chief of the American fleet will talk at the University of Minnesota late today and will be a guest tonight at an affair arranged by the St. Paul battalion of the naval reserve.

FIRE IN HUGE SULPHUR POCKET ENVELOPS SHIP

Providence, R. I., Oct. 27.—(UP)—Fire starting in a huge sulphur pocket on a nearby deck enveloped the 7,000 ton steamer Giltedge here today, trapping 26 seamen aboard the sulphur-laden vessel.

Forced to leap into the sea as flames ravaged the steamer, seven members of the crew narrowly escaped death. All were taken to Rhode Island hospital suffering from immersion. The fire raged for two hours, feeding on hundreds of tons of sulphur which sent flames spurring over a wide area.

Damage resulting from the blaze, which menaced the Providence water front, was estimated at $100,000.

EARL CARROLL IN THE ROLE OF PREACHER A DAY

"VANITIES" AND "SKETCH BOOK" PRODUCER ACCEPTS OFFER TO USE PULPIT

TO CARRY ON HIS PRIVATE WAR WITH CITY CENSOR JOHN M. CASEY

Boston, Oct. 27.—(UP)—Earl Carroll was preacher for a day.

The "Vanities" and "Sketch Book" producer accepted an offer to use the pulpit of the Channing Unitarian church in Dorchester yesterday to carry on his private war with City Censor John M. Casey and others who would make his chorus girls wear more than they do.

"God made beautiful legs and I am sure no covering could be as beautiful as the bare leg of a girl," Carroll said from the pulpit, referring to Casey's dictum that sketch book girls appearing in Boston must wear tight.

"I like to think of my God as a God with a sense of humor. The hardest thing in the world is to create a laugh," Mr. Casey destroys laughs but he doesn't give me one for each one he eliminates. I am sure my God has a sense of humor. If He didn't He could never have created so many of us.

"Mr. Casey comes down to the theatre to destroy. He comes to the theatre to track down the 'hells' and 'damns' and all the other petty things which a ridiculous law says must not be done or said in the theatre."

Casey had his say later. "I will not allow that man Carroll to stand up in a pulpit and hold me up to ridicule while he attempts to gloss over the truth," the censor said at his home.

"His girls arrived in Boston, not without stockings, but without costumes. Even the savages wear more of a covering than his girls wear. He knows very well that I would allow his girls to appear without stockings if they wore decent costumes. Boston does not ban bare legs, but it does ban indecency."

Casey said he did not object to the word "hell" when it is used "as such" but said he did object "when it is used to emphasize and throw the spotlight on filth and sex indecency so that not even a child could miss it."

The British prime minister's official residence in Downing street was a gift from George II to his favorite minister, Sir Robert Walpole, "and his successor for ever."

GETS POLICE AID DRIVING IN TOWN

KANSAS WOMAN AFRAID TO FACE TRAFFIC OF KANSAS CITY, MO.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 27.—(UP)—"Spot" said Mrs. Harry Alexander of Pittsburgh, Kans., to her collar dog, as she stopped her car yesterday at the south edge of Kansas City and watched the heavy traffic roll by. "What do you think of the idea of me driving through this town. They say it's got jay drivers and traffic lights."

Spot gravely dismounted from his post on the left running board of the model T Ford car, built in the good old days, and walked a short distance away.

"You're right, Spot," said Mrs. Alexander, as she followed her mascot to the nearest filling station, where she explained to the attendant the vital necessity of driving through the city in order to reach the Iowa corn fields, where her husband is employed.

"You see," she told the attendant "I once hit a child in heavy traffic, and I'm afraid to try it here. Do you suppose the police would help?"

The attendant grinned, and announced Mrs. Alexander might call them up and see.

She did, and the net result was that the Ford moved through the city at its top speed of ten miles an hour and as a police escort opened the way with shrieking sirens. When last seen, Mrs. Alexander was in the clear again, bound for St. Joseph, Mo., the next big hazard of the trip.

PUBLIC'S OPINION ON FORGERY WILL NOT BE CHANGED

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(UP)—The public may change its views on socialism in two years but its view on forgery will remain the same, Judge John B. Sanborn of U. S. district court ruled today.

William Mauer, socialist, pleaded guilty to forging 111 pay checks stolen from the national guard armory at Fairbault.

When brought up for sentence, Mauer started a speech.

"I'm an out and out socialist, and I'm ready now to debate the issue of whether I'm dangerous or not. In two years things will be different."

"But the public's opinion on forgers will not be an different in two years," Judge Sanborn interrupted and imposed sentence.

GUNBOAT LUZON IS FIRED ON BY CHINESE

The Luzon returned and silenced the fire, McVay reported. It was the fourth time in less than a month that an American gunboat has been fired on by Chinese bandits.

Thorvaldson and his son have been missing since Wednesday when they were reported adrift in an open boat at the mercy of huge waves whipped up by the northern gale.

Captain Pears docked his boat at Warren's Landing at the height of the storm and passengers were forced to walk 20 miles to Norway House for shelter.

The Nelson river is frozen at Norway House and communications in the district are now being carried on by dog team due to a heavy snowfall, he reported.

FIRE IN HUGE SULPHUR POCKET ENVELOPS SHIP

Providence, R. I., Oct. 27.—(UP)—Fire starting in a huge sulphur pocket on a nearby deck enveloped the 7,000 ton steamer Giltedge here today, trapping 26 seamen aboard the sulphur-laden vessel.

Forced to leap into the sea as flames ravaged the steamer, seven members of the crew narrowly escaped death. All were taken to Rhode Island hospital suffering from immersion.

The fire raged for two hours, feeding on hundreds of tons of sulphur which sent flames spurting over a wide area.

Damage resulting from the blaze, which menaced the Providence water front, was estimated at $100,000.

EARL CARROLL IN THE ROLE OF PREACHER A DAY

"VANITIES" AND "SKETCH BOOK" PRODUCER ACCEPTS OFFER TO USE PULPIT

TO CARRY ON HIS PRIVATE WAR WITH CITY CENSOR JOHN M. CASEY

Boston, Oct. 27.—(UP)—Earl Carroll was preacher for a day.

The "Vanities" and "Sketch Book" producer accepted an offer to use the pulpit of the Channing Unitarian church in Dorchester yesterday to carry on his private war with City Censor John M. Casey and others who would make his chorus girls wear more than they do.

"God made beautiful legs and I am sure no covering could be as beautiful as the bare leg of a girl," Carroll said from the pulpit, referring to Casey's dictum that sketch book girls appearing in Boston must wear tights.

"I like to think of my God as a God with a sense of humor. The hardest thing in the world is to create a laugh. Mr. Casey destroys laughs but he doesn't give me one for each one he eliminates. I am sure my God has a sense of humor. If He didn't He could never have created so many of us."

"Mr. Casey comes down to the theatre to destroy. He comes to the theatre to track down the 'hells' and 'damns' and all the other petty things which a ridiculous law says must not be done or said in the theatre."

Casey had his say later. "I will not allow that man Carroll to stand up in a pulpit and hold me up to ridicule while he attempts to gloss over the truth," the censor said at his home.

"His girls arrived in Boston, not without stockings, but without costumes. Even the savages wear more of a covering than his girls wear. He knows very well that I would allow his girls to appear without stockings if they wore decent costumes. Boston does not ban bare legs, but it does ban indecency."

Casey said he did not object to the word "hell" when it is used "as such" but said he did object "when it is used to emphasize and throw the spotlight on filth and sex indecency so that not even a child could miss it."

GETS POLICE AID DRIVING IN TOWN

KANSAS WOMAN AFRAID TO FACE TRAFFIC OF KANSAS CITY, MO.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 27.—(UP)—"Spot" said Mrs. Harry Alexander of Pittsburgh, Kans., to her collie dog, as she stopped her car yesterday at the south edge of Kansas City and watched the heavy traffic roll by, "what do you think of the idea of me driving through this town. They say it's got jay drivers and traffic lights."

Spot gravely dismounted from his post on the left running board of the model T Ford car, built in the good old days, and walked a short distance away.

"You're right, Spot," said Mrs. Alexander, as she followed her mascot to the nearest filling station, where she explained to the attendant the vital necessity of driving through the city in order to reach the Iowa corn fields, where her husband is employed.

"You see," she told the attendant, "I once hit a child in heavy traffic, and I'm afraid to try it here. Do you suppose the police would help?"

The attendant grinned, and announced Mrs. Alexander might call them up and see.

She did, and the net result was that the Ford moved through the city at its top speed of ten miles an hour and as a police escort opened the way with shrieking sirens. When last seen, Mrs. Alexander was in the clear again, bound for St. Joseph, Mo., the next big hazard of the trip.

PUBLIC'S OPINION ON FORGERY WILL NOT BE CHANGED

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(UP)—The public may change its views on socialism in two years but its view on forgery will remain the same, Judge John B. Sanborn of U. S. district court ruled today.

William Mauer, socialist, pleaded guilty to forging 111 pay checks stolen from the national guard armory at Fairbault.

When brought up for sentence, Mauer started a speech.

"I'm an out and out socialist, and I'm ready now to debate the issue of whether I'm dangerous or not. In two years things will be different."

"But the public's opinion on forgers will not be an different in two years," Judge Sanborn interrupted and imposed sentence.

Kanevsky was sentenced with his brother, Henry. The pair pleaded guilty to maintaining a liquor nuisance at a drug store.

STEAMER BATTLES THROUGH STORM

FIND NO TRACE OF LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER ON GEORGE ISLAND

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 27.—(UP)—Battered by a wintry storm, the steamer Wolverine reached Selkirk today from George Island, Lake Winnipeg, and reported that no trace of Inga Thorvaldson, lighthouse keeper on the island, his small son had been found.

Thorvaldson and his son have been missing since Wednesday when they were reported adrift in an open boat at the mercy of huge waves whipped up by the northern gale.

Captain Nelson Pears of the Wolverine reported that ice had formed over the northern part of the lake. The gale and freezing temperatures tied up late fall shipping on the lake.

Captain Pears docked his boat at Warren's Landing at the height of the storm and passengers were forced to walk 20 miles to Norway House for shelter.

The Nelson river is frozen at Norway House and communications in the district are now being carried on by dog team due to a heavy snowfall, he reported.

Four Italian warships escorted the royal yacht when it left here yesterday. The king and queen arrived here by special train and were cheered by thousands.

Crown Prince Humbert of Italy and his wife, Princess Marie Jose, were among the last to bid the royal couple farewell. Former Czar Ferdinand, King Boris' father, escorted the royal yacht in a smaller boat for half an hour after it left port.

Explaining the American System

LESLIE M. SHAW, Secretary of the Treasury under Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt, has written a letter to Chairman Fess, of the Republican National Committee, dealing with the "American System" which frequently has been referred to by President Hoover in his public addresses. Mr. Shaw says:

"Twice during the campaign of 1928, Mr. Hoover referred to the 'American System,' and in his speech at Kings' Mountain he elucidated the thought. I wonder to what extent the voters of the country comprehend or appreciate what he means by the term 'American System.'

"It will bear repeating that only in America does industry know, and nowhere else is agriculture capable of learning, that the American payroll is the American market. It is estimated that 90% of the purchasing power of our people comes directly or indirectly from the rewards of industry, paid at stated intervals like wages, salaries and commissions. So when in 1929 utter chaos seemed imminent and Mr. Hoover warned the captains of production and transportation that the wage scale must not be cut, nor the standards of living lowered. He found ready response, and well-nigh universal cooperation.

"In some places men are now working but three days a week, yet the wage scale remains the same. Few have been discharged, and all others know their jobs, at the old scale of wages, are secure when prosperity returns. Hence we have had no labor riots, few strikes and no lockouts. This is but a part of 'the American System' to which the President delights to refer.

"In Germany the government has ordered a reduction in the wage scale, and that seems to be the policy everywhere except in America. Whether present tariff rates will prove sufficient to protect against this foreign system of lowering wage scales and increasing hours of labor no man can safely predict. If it does we are safe. If it does not, God only knows.

"Democrats say Mr. Hoover has no remedy for unemployment. That is a libel. Preeminent among his remedies is the preservation of the wage scale, and our high standards of living. Shorten hours, and even days if necessary, but preserve the wage scale and discharge as few as possible. Let everyone feel that his future is ever in the mind of his Government, and his employer. This coupled with the promise in every Republican platform, from the birth of the party, every domestic producer, from farm to factory, shall have some slight advantage in the market he makes, supports, defends with his life and is equipped in part to supply. Always in the past, industry, agriculture, transportation and commerce have made prompt response to correct governmental policies and they will again.

"Democrats also have a remedy for unemployment, and their leaders make bold to assert it in nearly every speech. It consists in a prompt reduction in tariff rates to the end that we may import more of the things our people now produce, this they say will solve the unemployment problem. I challenge any voter to name any other remedy that has been so much as squinted at by Democratic orators. Their platform pledge is such tariff duties as will 'promote effective foreign competition.' Effective competition is what the corner grocer experiences when a chain store opens across the street.

"It would be well for every voter to take into account the future of his children. When I was born $850 invested in plant and equipment furnished employment for one person. Today it requires an investment of nearly $10,000 per employee. Unless a parent can endow his child that child must find a place upon the payroll, join an over crowded profession or drift into the ranks of crime. The preservation of the American payroll is the outstanding issue of this campaign, and I invite the sober-minded in this time of stress to cast party overboard, and walk the mountain ranges with Hoover.

Keeping the Judgeship in Crow Wing County

ONE of the most important matters to be decided in the coming election on November 4 is that concerning the district judgeship. It is of the greatest importance to citizens and taxpayers of Crow Wing county that we retain our district judge, M. E. Ryan, in office. He has proven himself to be possessed of fine ability, integrity and fairness and his continuance in office should be supported by a vote, making it practically unanimous in this county.

Crow Wing county has a larger population than any other county in the district, Brainerd, the county seat, is the largest city in the district. There are three judges, and surely we are entitled to retain the one we have. Ever since the district was organized, Brainerd has had a district judge. It means much to Crow Wing county and Brainerd. It brings many people to the county. It is an asset we should retain, and we should line up solidly to resist any attempt at removal.

There are many advantages to us in keeping the office here. If the district judgeship were removed to Grand Rapids, it would mean in many matters of court procedure, that litigants in some cases and taxpayers in others, would have to pay the extra expense of transportation, 87 miles of travel to Grand Rapids.

Lawyers and other citizens of Itasca county have formed an organization to elect Mr. Thwing. If it is important enough to Itasca county to make such an effort to secure this office, it surely is important enough to the citizens of Crow Wing county to vote unanimously to retain it.

What to Wear

A GERMAN artist has solved the question of what colors to wear. The color which looks best on a woman depends on whether she has a warm or a cold face.

As defined by Herman Schletten in a Berlin daily, "if you have a healthy glowing color, with deep blond hair, you are warm, and should wear warm colors. If your face is pale, then you are cold, and should wear cold, faint colors, blue, and silvery tones."

WE hope that alleged buyers strike will be broken before the Christmas holidays.

FEW REASONS FOR TEST VARIATIONS

Cream Separator May Be Blamed for Differences.

When cream tests vary there is usually a reason, and before doubting the test it is well to consider the things that will cause the differences, suggests E. S. Guthrie of the department of dairy industry at Cornell university.

A difference of ten turns each minute on the separator crank will change the test nearly three and a half per cent. The temperature of the milk at the time of separation, if at 70 degrees instead of 90, lowers the cream test and lets more fat go in the skim milk.

Cows which may be added to the herd or a fresh cow may change the herd test. Under uniform conditions at the college a 3 per cent milk gave a 23 per cent cream, a 4 per cent milk a 30 per cent cream, and a 5 per cent milk a 39 per cent cream. The percentage of fat in the skim milk increased with the richer milk.

Cleaning the separator is not only a good sanitary practice but it is essential to efficient separation; clogged and dirty tubes hinder the normal flow. Mr. Guthrie cites Cornell extension bulletin number 151 as useful in the care and operation of a cream separator. It will be sent free to anyone who applies for it to the college of agriculture at Ithaca, New York.

Proving Dairy Bulls Is Becoming of Importance

Proving dairy bulls is becoming an important and, apparently, necessary part of the breeder's program in his needs for better cattle. The dairy extension service of New Jersey recently reported some very good evidence of the breeding value of three bulls in that state.

Twenty-two daughters of a Holstein bull, sold by Henry Schmidt to the Newark Milk company farm, averaged 11,919 lbs. milk and 382.8 lbs. butterfat at an average age of three and one-half years.

"Old Contemptible," a Guernsey bull owned by Locust Lane farm, has 10 daughters that averaged 375 lbs. butterfat. Nine of these were two-year-olds. The average mature equivalent of these records is 528 lbs. butterfat.

The senior Holstein herd sire of the New Jersey Agricultural college herd has 10 daughters that averaged 13,500 lbs. milk on official test in Class C, 10 months' division. This was 11 per cent more than the production of their dams at comparable ages. This bull is a son of a proven sire and was secured from the United States government dairy farm at Beltsville, Md.

Importance of Quality of Legume Hay for Cow

Over in Michigan there is a herd that has a six-year average of 13,000 pounds of milk per cow. This is splendid production. It would be a creditable average for one year. For a six-year period it is wonderful. The owner of the herd, Mr. Hunt, was interviewed and gave his views on feeding to Hoard's Dairyman. His main emphasis was not on this or that grain mixture but on the quality of the legume hay fed. He believes there is an important relationship between the quality of the hay and the health of the herd. Well cured legume hay contains essential vitamins which aid in assimilation of minerals, and minerals have a very important bearing on health.

Dairy Hints

Cows in milk need plenty of water at all times.

Many of our dairy herds are unprofitable because of underfeeding.

Plenty of succulent feed for the dairy herd means more milk in the pail and a smaller expenditure for the more expensive grain.

Take a look at the heifers out on pasture. They may be short of water or feed or both. It pays to keep the young stock growing.

Soy beans, oats and peas, Sudan grass, and the millets are emergency hays. Of these soy beans are the best. They are nearly equal to alfalfa in feeding value.

Proper culling of dairy herds will help to reduce the surplus of dairy products and to increase the profits of individual herds.

An abundant supply of hot water is essential if the dairy utensils are to be washed and sterilized properly. Many farmers who are using a gas engine as a source of power for their milking machines or cream separators are finding that water can be heated quickly and economically by the use of an exhaust water heater attached to their gas engines.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CREOMULSION FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

"It's the little things that tell"

That's what big sister said to her boy friend as he pulled little brother out from under the sofa. But wait till big sister and the boy friend are man and wife, with a home of their own to run. Then how much more she'll realize the truth of her observation!

For then the age old problems will come pressing hard. So much in the pocketbook. So much on the shopping list. Will it fit? Then's when the little things make the big difference. The little savings—the small economies—the slightly better values of which a good housekeeper takes advantage.

Then's when big sister will read the advertisements as she never read them before. Comparing values; learning reliable brands; watching the bargain and reduction announcements. . . . The advertisements will help her in a thousand ways to take care of the little things, acquire the little short-cuts in time and effort—in the big job of running a home.

Read the advertisements every day. Consistently advertised goods are worthy of your confidence . . . otherwise they couldn't be consistently advertised

Explaining the American System

LESLIE M. SHAW, Secretary of the Treasury under Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt, has written a letter to Chairman Fess, of the Republican National Committee, dealing with the "American System" which frequently has been referred to by President Hoover in his public addresses. Mr. Shaw says:

"Twice during the campaign of 1928, Mr. Hoover referred to the 'American System,' and in his speech at Kings' Mountain he elucidated the thought. I wonder to what extent the voters of the country comprehend or appreciate what he means by the term 'American System.'

"It will bear repeating that only in America does industry know, and nowhere else is agriculture capable of learning, that the American payroll is the American market. It is estimated that 90% of the purchasing power of our people comes directly or indirectly from the rewards of industry, paid at stated intervals like wages, salaries and commissions. So when in 1929 utter chaos seemed imminent and Mr. Hoover warned the captains of production and transportation that the wage scale must not be cut, nor the standards of living lowered. He found ready response, and well-nigh universal cooperation.

"In some places men are now working but three days a week, yet the wage scale remains the same. Few have been discharged, and all others know their jobs, at the old scale of wages, are secure when prosperity returns. Hence we have had no labor riots, few strikes and no lockouts. This is but a part of 'the American System' to which the President delights to refer.

"In Germany the government has ordered a reduction in the wage scale, and that seems to be the policy everywhere except in America. Whether present tariff rates will prove sufficient to protect against this foreign system of lowering wage scales and increasing hours of labor no man can safely predict. If it does we are safe. If it does not, God only knows.

"Democrats say Mr. Hoover has no remedy for unemployment. That is a libel. Preeminent among his remedies is the preservation of the wage scale, and our high standards of living. Shorten hours, and even days if necessary, but preserve the wage scale and discharge as few as possible. Let everyone feel that his future is ever in the mind of his Government, and his employer. This coupled with the promise in every Republican platform, from the birth of the party, every domestic producer, from farm to factory, shall have some slight advantage in the market he makes, supports, defends with his life and is equipped in part to supply. Always in the past, industry, agriculture, transportation and commerce have made prompt response to correct governmental policies and they will again.

"Democrats also have a remedy for unemployment, and their leaders make bold to assert it in nearly every speech. It consists in a prompt reduction in tariff rates to the end that we may import more of the things our people now produce, this they say will solve the unemployment problem. I challenge any voter to name any other remedy that has been so much as squinted at by Democratic orators. Their platform pledge is such tariff duties as will 'promote effective foreign competition.' Effective competition is what the corner grocer experiences when a chain store opens across the street.

"It would be well for every voter to take into account the future of his children. When I was born $850 invested in plant and equipment furnished employment for one person. Today it requires an investment of nearly $10,000 per employee. Unless a parent can endow his child that child must find a place upon the payroll, join an over crowded profession or drift into the ranks of crime. The preservation of the American payroll is the outstanding issue of this campaign, and I invite the sober-minded in this time of stress to cast party overboard, and walk the mountain ranges with Hoover.

Keeping the Judgeship in Crow Wing County

ONE of the most important matters to be decided in the coming election on November 4 is that concerning the district judgeship. It is of the greatest importance to citizens and taxpayers of Crow Wing county that we retain our district judge, M. E. Ryan, in office. He has proven himself to be possessed of fine ability, integrity and fairness and his continuance in office should be supported by a vote, making it practically unanimous in this county.

Crow Wing county has a larger population than any other county in the district, Brainerd, the county seat, is the largest city in the district. There are three judges, and surely we are entitled to retain the one we have. Ever since the district was organized, Brainerd has had a district judge. It means much to Crow Wing county and Brainerd. It brings many people to the county. It is an asset we should retain, and we should line up solidly to resist any attempt at removal.

There are many advantages to us in keeping the office here. If the district judgeship were removed to Grand Rapids, it would mean in many matters of court procedure, that litigants in some cases and taxpayers in others, would have to pay the extra expense of transportation, 87 miles of travel to Grand Rapids.

Lawyers and other citizens of Itasca county have formed an organization to elect Mr. Thwing. If it is important enough to Itasca county to make such an effort to secure this office, it surely is important enough to the citizens of Crow Wing county to vote unanimously to retain it.

What to Wear

A GERMAN artist has solved the question of what colors to wear. The color which looks best on a woman depends on whether she has a warm or a cold face.

As defined by Herman Schletten in a Berlin daily, "if you have a healthy glowing color, with deep blond hair, you are warm, and should wear warm colors. If your face is pale, then you are cold, and should wear cold, faint colors, blue, and silvery tones."

WE hope that alleged buyers strike will be broken before the Christmas holidays.

ALF and Clarence Daniel of Buffalo Gap, S. D., recently bagged six large Canadian geese.

FEW REASONS FOR TEST VARIATIONS

Cream Separator May Be Blamed for Differences.

When cream tests vary there is usually a reason, and before doubting the test it is well to consider the things that will cause the differences, suggests E. S. Guthrie of the department of dairy industry at Cornell university.

A difference of ten turns each minute on the separator crank will change the test nearly three and a half per cent. The temperature of the milk at the time of separation, if at 70 degrees instead of 90, lowers the cream test and lets more fat go in the skim milk.

Cows which may be added to the herd or a fresh cow may change the herd test. Under uniform conditions at the college a 3 per cent milk gave a 23 per cent cream, a 4 per cent milk a 30 per cent cream, and a 5 per cent milk a 39 per cent cream. The percentage of fat in the skim milk increased with the richer milk.

Cleaning the separator is not only a good sanitary practice but it is essential to efficient separation; clogged and dirty tubes hinder the normal flow. Mr. Guthrie cites Cornell extension bulletin number 151 as useful in the care and operation of a cream separator. It will be sent free to anyone who applies for it to the college of agriculture at Ithaca, New York.

Proving Dairy Bulls Is Becoming of Importance

Proving dairy bulls is becoming an important and, apparently, necessary part of the breeder's program in his needs for better cattle. The dairy extension service of New Jersey recently reported some very good evidence of the breeding value of three bulls in that state.

Twenty-two daughters of a Holstein bull, sold by Henry Schmidt to the Newark Milk company farm, averaged 11,919 lbs. milk and 382.5 lbs. butterfat at an average age of three and one-half years.

"Old Contemptible," a Guernsey bull owned by Locust Lane farm, has 10 daughters that averaged 375 lbs. butterfat. Nine of these were two-year-olds. The average mature equivalent of these records is 528 lbs. butterfat. The senior Holstein herd sire of the New Jersey Agricultural college herd has 10 daughters that averaged 13,500 lbs. milk on official test in Class C, 10 months' division. This was 11 per cent more than the production of their dams at comparable ages. This bull is a son of a proven sire and was secured from the United States government dairy farm at Beltsville, Md.

Importance of Quality of Legume Hay for Cow

Over in Michigan there is a herd that has a six-year average of 13,000 pounds of milk per cow. This is splendid production. It would be a creditable average for one year. For a six-year period it is wonderful. The owner of the herd, Mr. Hunt, was interviewed and gave his views on feeding to Hoard's Dairyman. His main emphasis was not on this or that grain mixture but on the quality of the legume hay fed. He believes there is an important relationship between the quality of the hay and the health of the herd. Well cured legume hay contains essential vitamins which aid in assimilation of minerals, and minerals have a very important bearing on health.

Dairy Hints

Cows in milk need plenty of water at all times.

Many of our dairy herds are unprofitable because of underfeeding.

Plenty of succulent feed for the dairy herd means more milk in the pail and a smaller expenditure for the more expensive grain.

Take a look at the heifers out on pasture. They may be short of water or feed or both. It pays to keep the young stock growing.

Soy beans, oats and peas, Sudan grass, and the millets are emergency hays. Of these soy beans are the best. They are nearly equal to alfalfa in feeding value.

Proper culling of dairy herds will help to reduce the surplus of dairy products and to increase the profits of individual herds.

An abundant supply of hot water is essential if the dairy utensils are to be washed and sterilized properly. Many farmers who are using a gas engine as a source of power for their milking machines or cream separators are finding that water can be heated quickly and economically by the use of an exhaust water heater attached to their gas engines.

Hopes to Be Nebraska's First Woman in Senate

Mrs. Beatrice Fenton Craig, independent candidate for United States Senator, is confident that she will be the first Nebraska woman to get that office. Mrs. Craig is a Lincoln, Nebraska, school teacher. She has made speeches in every county in the State. (International Newsreel)

Kills Stepdaughter by Use of Ground Glass

Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin (upper) confessed to Denver police that she drowned her ten-year-old stepdaughter, Leona (lower). The girl's body was found in Berkeley Lake on October 18. An examination showed that the girl had been fed ground glass and badly beaten before she was thrown in the water. (International Newsreel)

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CREOMULSION FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

"It's the little things that tell"

That's what big sister said to her boy friend as she pulled little brother out from under the sofa. But wait till big sister and the boy friend are man and wife, with a home of their own to run. Then how much more she'll realize the truth of her observation!

For then the age old problems will come pressing hard. So much in the pocketbook. So much on the shopping list. Will it fit? Then's when the little things make the big difference. The little savings—the small economies—the slightly better values of which a good housekeeper takes advantage.

Then's when big sister will read the advertisements as she never read them before. Comparing values; learning reliable brands; watching the bargain and reduction announcements. . . . The advertisements will help her in a thousand ways to take care of the little things, acquire the little short-cuts in time and effort—in the big job of running a home.

Read the advertisements every day. Consistently advertised goods are worthy of your confidence . . . otherwise they couldn't be consistently advertised

BIG TEN'S STRONGEST TEAM SEEMS TO BE NORTHWESTERN

KANSAS U. STAR HALFBACK IS TROUBLE CENTER

EXPERTS SAY
THEY HAVE CHANCE
TO WIN TITLE

ON OCTOBER FORM, NORTH-
WESTERN DESERVES TO BE
RANKED ABOVE MICHIGAN

BY TWIST OF SCHEDULE MICHIGAN MAY GO THROUGH WITHOUT DEFEAT
By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Oct. 27.—The Big Ten's strongest team seems to be Northwestern, yet paradoxically Michigan appears to have the best chance to win the western conference football championship.

On October form, Northwestern deserves to be ranked above Michigan, but by a twist of the schedule Michigan seems most likely to complete its conference games without defeat.

Michigan has won its three conference games from Purdue, Ohio State and Illinois and has only to play Minnesota and Chicago, both at home. Northwestern has won from Ohio State and Illinois, but has to play Minnesota, Indiana and Wisconsin on successive weeks, the first two away from home.

Five teams are left in the Big Ten race, but Purdue's only hope is for all the other teams to lose at least one game, while it would take a general scramble to put Wisconsin back in the running. Minnesota remains undefeated in Big Ten competition, but has only one victory, a bare 6-0 win over weak Indiana.

If Michigan defeats Minnesota on November 15, the Wolverines will be as good as Big Ten champions as Chicago's feeble team hasn't one chance in 100 of stopping Michigan in its final game.

Northwestern, however, could tie Michigan for the title. If both Northwestern and Michigan should lose one game, Purdue, with six conference games, one more than any other team, 0.

would stand an excellent chance of retaining its championship.

Purdue has beaten Iowa and Wisconsin, but lost to Michigan, 14-13, in its first game. The Boilermakers have yet to play Illinois, Chicago and Indiana and their chances will be better than even of winning the last two if they down Illinois this week.

How the five Big Ten leaders stack up:

Northwestern—has powerful line and great passing attack but has yet to demonstrate consistent running attack. Baker, end, and Rentner, fullback, are two of the best players in the conference, strong in reserve strength.

Michigan—well grounded in fundamentals and always on top of ball. Newman, quarterback, is sparkplug of team, with his generalship and passing.

Purdue—best balanced team in conference, with good running attack, featuring Risk, Kisseil and Pope.

Wisconsin—powerful team, with more individual stars than any other eleven in conference. Lubratovich, tackle, one of best linemen in middle west.

Minnesota—team has improved considerably and may surprise after its poor October record, losing to Vanderbilt, tying Stanford and barely nosing out Indiana.

"LIGHTHORSE" SHOOT GOLF UNDER PAR AT SALT LAKE CITY TOURNAMENT

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 27.—(UP)—"Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, Los Angeles professional, was $1,500 richer today because of his ability to shoot golf under par.

Cooper played four rounds in Salt Lake's annual open tournament for an aggregate score of 283, five strokes under par, to win first prize money.

Olin Dutra, also from the southern California city, was a close second, shooting a total of 285 in the event to win $1,000. Dutra's sensational playing Sunday featured the tournament.

In the morning round he shot five birdies and turned in a card of 63, four under par.

George Von Elm, Detroit, former amateur who made his debut as a professional, picked up $500, dividing third and fourth place money with Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J. Both had card totals of 290.

CHARGE BAUSCH AS GUILTY OF PROFESSIONALISM

EVIDENCE MAY BAR JAYHAWKER ATHLETES FROM BIG SIX COMPETITION

KANSAS UNIVERSITY, FOR TIME
BEING, CONSIDERS BAUSCH ELIGIBLE

Lawrence, Kan., Oct. 27.—(UP)—Pending a complete investigation of charges that Jim Bausch, star halfback, has been guilty of professionalism, the University of Kansas athletic board last night met and considered evidence which may bar Jayhawk athletes from Big Six conference competition.

The athletic board of Kansas University, virtually ostracized from the conference Saturday when faculty representatives at the end of this year, said for the time being Bausch would be considered eligible.

Bausch was declared ineligible on a charge of professionalism growing out of the discovery that he is receiving a salary of $75 a month from a Topeka, Kan., insurance company as payment for his services as a salesman.

Dr. George C. Shado, Kansas faculty representative to the conference meeting, said he felt evidence presented by Missouri University that Kansas was guilty of subsidizing had been "inadequate."

The Kansas board stated in a written statement that it desired a complete investigation of Big Six athletics before taking such drastic action as to leave the conference.

Every little canvas-back will probably appreciate the following duck story. They will never know what pain it saved them!

Babe and Curley (also known to some Brainerd people as Korac, the Killer) were going hunting together yesterday morning at 5 o'clock. Yes, sir, there was no doubt about that! Curley set his alarm clock for the appointed hour and he relates that it was quite trying to pull himself out of bed at that time of day. He dressed and awaited the truant "Babe." The first two hours were the hardest and since it was Sunday, Curley decided that he might as well go back to bed. The two would-be nimrods met later in the day and Curley wanted to know where in the "Babe" had been keeping himself and asked if he remembered the agreement of the previous evening. "Sure I did," quoth Babe, "and I got up, too, but I couldn't find my shoes."

BIG TEN'S STRONGEST TEAM SEEMS TO BE NORTHWESTERN

EXPERTS SAY
THEY HAVE CHANCE
TO WIN TITLE

ON OCTOBER FORM, NORTH-
WESTERN DESERVES TO BE
RANKED ABOVE MICHIGAN

BY TWIST OF SCHEDULE MICHIGAN
MAY GO THROUGH WITHOUT DEFEAT

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Oct. 27. — The Big Ten's strongest team seems to be Northwestern, yet paradoxically Michigan appears to have the best chance to win the western conference football championship.

On October form, Northwestern deserves to be ranked above Michigan, but by a twist of the schedule Michigan seems most likely to complete its conference games without defeat.

Michigan has won its three conference games from Purdue, Ohio State and Illinois and has only to play Minnesota and Chicago, both at home. Northwestern has won from Ohio State and Illinois, but has to play Minnesota, Indiana and Wisconsin on successive weeks, the first two away from home.

Five teams are left in the Big Ten race, but Purdue's only hope is for all the other teams to lose at least one game, while it would take a general scramble to put Wisconsin back in the running. Minnesota remains undefeated in Big Ten competition, but has only one victory, a bare 6-0 win over weak Indiana.

If Michigan defeats Minnesota on November 15, the Wolverines will be as good as Big Ten champions as Chicago's feeble team hasn't one chance in 100 of stopping Michigan in its final game.

Northwestern, however, could tie Michigan for the title. If both Northwestern and Michigan should lose one game, Purdue, with six conference games, one more than any other team, would stand an excellent chance of retaining its championship.

Purdue has beaten Iowa and Wisconsin, but lost to Michigan, 14-13, in its first game. The Boilermakers have yet to play Illinois, Chicago and Indiana and their chances will be better than even of winning the last two if they down Illinois this week.

How the five Big Ten leaders stack up:

Northwestern — has powerful line and great passing attack but has yet to demonstrate consistent running attack. Baker, end, and Rentner, fullback, are two of the best players in the conference, strong in reserve strength.

Michigan — well grounded in fundamentals and always on top of ball. Newman, quarterback, is sparkplug of team, with his generalship and passing.

Purdue — best balanced team in conference, with good running attack, featuring Risk, Kissell and Pope.

Wisconsin — powerful team, with more individual stars than any other eleven in conference. Lubratovich, tackle, one of best linemen in middle west.

Minnesota — team has improved considerably and may surprise after its poor October record, losing to Vanderbilt, tying Stanford and barely nosing out Indiana.

"LIGHORSE" SHOOT GOLF UNDER PAR AT SALT LAKE CITY TOURNEY

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 27.—(UP)—"Lighorse" Harry Cooper, Los Angeles professional, was $1,500 richer today because of his ability to shoot golf under par.

Cooper played four rounds in Salt Lake's annual open tournament for an aggregate score of 283, five strokes under par, to win first prize money.

Olin Dutra, also from the southern California city, was a close second, shooting a total of 285 in the event to win $1,000. Dutra's sensational playing Sunday featured the tournament. In the morning round he shot five birdies and turned in a card of 63, four under par.

George Von Elm, Detroit, former amateur who made his debut as a professional, picked up $500, dividing third and fourth place money with Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J. Both had card totals of 290.

Lawrence, Kan., Oct. 27.—(UP)—Pending a complete investigation of charges that Jim Bausch, star halfback, has been guilty of professionalism, the University of Kansas athletic board last night met and considered evidence which may bar Jayhawk athletes from Big Six conference competition.

The athletic board of Kansas University, virtually ostracized from the conference Saturday when faculty representatives at the end of this year, said for the time being Bausch would be considered eligible.

Bausch was declared ineligible on a charge of professionalism growing out of the discovery that he is receiving a salary of $75 a month from a Topeka, Kan., insurance company as payment for his services as a salesman.

Dr. George C. Shado, Kansas faculty representative to the conference meeting, said he felt evidence presented by Missouri University that Kansas was guilty of subsidizing had been "inadequate."

The Kansas board stated in a written statement that it desired a complete investigation of Big Six athletics before taking such drastic action as to leave the conference.

SPORTS KAYOES
By "HAPPY"

Every little canvas-back will probably appreciate the following duck story. They will never know what pain it saved them!

Babe and Curley (also known to some Brainerd people as Korac, the Killer) were going hunting together yesterday morning at 5 o'clock. Yes, sir, there was no doubt about that! Curley set his alarm clock for the appointed hour and he relates that it was quite trying to pull himself out of bed at that time of day. He dressed and awaited the truant "Babe." The first two hours were the hardest and since it was Sunday, Curley decided that he might as well go back to bed. The two would-be nimrods met later in the day and Curley wanted to know where in the "hills" Babe had been keeping himself and asked if he remembered the agreement of the previous evening. "Sure I did," quoth Babe, "and I got up, too, but I couldn't find my shoes."

And they let people like that live!

And Lady Luck evidently still lives at the University of Michigan, too. That lucky team, which has beaten Minnesota several times when it had no business to, has a very good chance now of copying the Big Ten title and in our opinion it certainly is not the best team in the conference. Those Wolverines certainly must have had a horseshoe in every pocket when they nosed out Purdue by a single point several weeks ago. We don't hesitate to say that we think there are at least three better teams in the conference than Michigan and they are Purdue, Northwestern and Wisconsin.

A lot of curb-stone quarterbacks are railing about Fritz Crisler and his Minnesota team. In our opinion Fritz isn't doing so badly. We think that Doc Spears left him in quite a hole with a schedule which included some hard games at the first of the season and a squad in which the leading lights were taken by graduation. On top of this, the system of Crisler and the system of Spears are as different as day and night. It takes some time to get accustomed to so radical a change. We predict right now that Crisler will have a fair season this year and that in a season or two Minnesota will be just as near or nearer to the top of the conference heap than it was in the days of "Doc" Spears.

We regard the high school athletic situation here much in the same way. Damman's boys have not set any record at winning ball games this year, but those who have seen them play must admit that Damman and Taylor have instilled a lot of fighting spirit into a team that was riddled by graduation last spring. Damman has a nice bunch of boys who are trying hard for positions and the substitutes that he sends in are just about as effective as the regulars. In other words the whole squad has the spirit and while we don't look for a lot of victories, we are sure that Brainerd will be in there fighting to the last in every game this year and things look fairly rosy for next year.

We don't predict that Brainerd will trim Crosby-Ironton this year, however, after the 27-0 trimming that the C-I boys handed Atkin Saturday. Captain Nickander and his boys from Atkin looked pretty good here a week or so ago, so C-I must have a real ball club this year. In fact teams throughout the district seem stronger than they did last year. There is no doubt in our mind that Atkin and Little Falls are represented by better aggregations.

The attempt of some publicity experts at Yale to make an All-American out of little Albie Booth is quite humorous to us. One would almost believe that the other ten men who play with Albie are just on the field for the look of things or perhaps they are there just to hand the ball to Albie, but certainly they play no part whatever in winning ball games for Dear Old Yale!

Wise Old Coyote Takes Few Chances on Traps
Ordinarily the coyote does not band like the timber wolf. The person unacquainted with coyotes and their habits would hardly believe the above statement after listening for the first time to the howling of one or two of these animals. The coyote can make more noise for his size than any animal in the woods and a solitary male can so change the volume and direction of his voice that one would almost swear there were a dozen coyotes doing their stuff.

If a coyote locates dead game and is afraid to run chances of getting his toes pinched he will, provided he is a wise old beast, employ a simple strategy to test the danger of the place. Setting back on his haunches he will send a few well-rounded calls into the air, a sort of hunting cry which signals for help. The nearest coyote, particularly if it be a young and uninitiated fellow, will answer the call and come post haste. While the wise one holds back the newcomer will walk up and investigate. Presently, providing nothing serious happens, the old one will come on in and partake of the feast. But, as sometimes happens, if the youngster steps into a steel trap, the other unceremoniously takes his leave, another sly wrinkle of wisdom forming on his shrewd face as he steals cautiously away.

Valor consists in the power of self-recovery, so that a man cannot have his flank turned, cannot be outgeneraled, but put him where you will, he stands.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

ST. THOMAS AND
ST. OLAF TO TIE
IN CONFERENCE

UNLESS PRESENT INDICATIONS ARE RADICALLY CHANGED,

BOTH TEAMS HAVE COMPLETED
THEIR CONFERENCE
SCHEDULES UNDEFEATED

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(UP)—St. Thomas and St. Olaf will tie for the state conference gridiron title unless present indications are radically changed, football observers agreed today.

Both teams have completed their conference schedules undefeated so far and will enter as strong favorites in their remaining two games. The teams do not meet on this year's schedule.

St. Olaf draws the heavier assignment Saturday when they meet Gustavus Adolphus at Northfield. The Oles, however, are favored to win. An indication of the relative strength of the league-leading teams will be furnished in their conflict as St. Thomas won over Gustavus by a 6-0 score a week ago.

St. Thomas meets the weak Augsburg team at Minneapolis Saturday and will be an overwhelming favorite to win. St. Thomas' impressive 19-7 win over Macalester Friday night and defeat of Gustavus has marked the team as a brilliant offensive and steady defensive machine.

A week later the Tommies will wind up their conference season against Hamline while St. Olaf will play Augsburg.

Concordia will meet Macalester at Moorhead Saturday in a game that is expected to be very closely fought with a possible slight advantage going to Macalester. Both Concordia and Macalester have shown considerable power during the season but have been hampered by lack of experience.

Two non-conference games are on the schedule. Carleton will journey to Vermillion, S. D., to play the University of South Dakota and St. Mary's will go to Superior for a game with Superior State Teachers college.

ALMOST invariably the quarterback is the brains of a football team even when he functions merely as the chief of staff of some coaching genius. The play-by-play detail is left to his decision though in the huddle the captain's voice often commands the situation. A smart quarterback is both the spark plug and the compass of his outfit. On defense he's safety man, final obstacle between his goal line and an opposing runner who gets into the clear. He must also be expert in catching punts and running them back. All in all, he must be the liveliest wire in the backfield.

Two of the ablest quarterbacks now active come to mind when the foregoing qualifications are considered. One, of course, is Yale's famed Albie Booth, spectacular climax runner, a remarkably skilled kicker, a capable passer, and a dynamo who transfigures the Eli team with his own electrical spirit whenever he's in the game. Li'l Albie (he weighs about 150 and is comparatively short) seldom plays more than half a game but what a pepsy lift he imparts to Old Eli by merely trotting on the field! And when in action, Albie's always a marked man which makes it all the more difficult to get by the line of scrimmage. But when he does, he's a hip-weaving wealth pivoting on the proverbial dime—a touchdown maker who gives spectators the utmost in thrills. Fully as valuable to a team, if not so conspicuous as a crowd thriller, is Cooper French, Penn State's brainy and agile quarter. His brother, Walter, was an Army backfield ace a few seasons ago and Cooper is doing more than his share to continue the family's football fame. He is heavier and, many insist, far more rugged than Albie Booth. Like the latter, he's versatile and has the all-important "quarterback mind" to direct play under fire. His team tackles Bucknell next Saturday while Booth's battles Dartmouth.

NEW MACHINE WILL FORETELL WEATHER

Forecasting Months Ahead Predicted by Expert.

Washington.—Accurate weather forecasts soon will be made months in advance through the use of machinery, Henry C. Clayton, Smithsonian institution meteorologist, predicts.

The weather is not a haphazard occurrence, but is subject to calculation, and this will lead to a revolution in the present methods of forecasting, he said, adding:

"The forecasting of pressure and temperature will be made in much the same way that ocean tides are predicted, except that the periods used will be solar periods rather than lunar periods and will need to be treated in a special way, owing to changes in phase and amplitude.

Sun Pulses Vary.
"Processes will be simplified and machinery like tidal machines will be introduced to handle the immense amount of data which will be needed for world-wide forecasts, or even for forecasts over a large area like the United States."

It has been proved that complicated pulses of the sun's radiation occur both as long-period changes in the terms of years and also as shorter variations of only a few days' duration.

These pulses in the sun's radiation, according to Clayton, are attended by variations in atmospheric pressure, which increase the contrasts in pressure and speed up the circulation of the atmosphere.

When solar activity increases, the pressure falls in the equatorial region, rises in middle latitudes, and falls in the polar regions.

The regularity of these changes is interfered with by the distribution of land and water and by the seasonal changes, so that the rate of progression of the atmosphere waves is greatly complicated, he pointed out.

Periods Calculated.
Clayton's method of forecasting is by means of these period vibrations in the sun and atmosphere. Analysis of such period terms in the weather at any point on the earth would make it possible to project the period terms ahead to any length of time desired.

Since there are variations in the amplitude and phase of the periods, it is necessary to redetermine the periodic terms at short intervals and to limit the time in advance which they are made to cover, he explained.

Thus when these in the periodic term become calculable, this method of forecasting will replace all others, in Clayton's opinion.

London Star Has Mobile Press for Latest News

London.—Something new to Londoners in the way of fast delivery of late news to readers has been accomplished by the London evening newspaper, the Star, which is regularly operating a "Stop Press" printing establishment in its largest delivery van.

The equipment comprises a complete composing frame and type cases, and a suction-fed Bush printing machine capable of printing anything up to three thirty line news items at a speed up to 10,000 copies an hour.

News items are received by radio from the office of the Star and are set up and run off in the so-called blank "fudge column" as fast as they are received. The printing can be done as the van is rushing deliveries to the more distant suburbs, but it is more customary to install the van outside big horse race, football or other sports meetings, enabling the spectators as the meeting breaks up to buy London papers with the very latest news in them.

The van is also equipped with a special Marconiphone amplifier and two public address loud speakers through which broadcast microphone announcements can be made.

Lawrence Washington Check for $26.15 Found

Richmond, Va.—An old check bearing the signature of Lawrence Washington, who is believed to have been the last male member of the Washington family born at Mount Vernon on the Potomac, has been presented to the Virginia State library, it has been announced by Dr. Henry R. McIlwaine, the librarian. The check was brought to light recently when Mack Weekley, of Richmond, purchased a collection of old papers.

The check is dated September 10, 1861, and is drawn to the order of cash on the Farmers' bank of Virginia, then at Fredericksburg, Va., for the sum of $26.15. It is signed "Law Washington." The signature is believed to be that of Lawrence Washington, who was a grand nephew of George Washington.

Dogs Want Milk, Cow Objects, Dogs Bite Cow

Lynn, Mass.—Mrs. Lena Shapiro, owner of a milk farm in Saugas, today complained to Patrolman James P. Sullivan that one of her cows had been assaulted by two dogs. Investigation by the policeman revealed that the dogs were attempting to steal milk from the cow, that the cow objected by kicking the dogs and that the dogs retaliated by biting the cow.

The dogs were ordered by the Board of Health to be kept in leash for two weeks, the cow to be examined for traces of rabies.

ON REARING CHILDREN from CRIB TO COLLEGE

Compiled by the Editors of THE PARENTS' MAGAZINE

If you have taught your child not to make precipitate decisions, not to act on impulse, or to be guided entirely by his emotions, but to be thoughtful in money matters through the wise use of his allowance and to be careful in his judgments of people through a wide acquaintance and the opportunity to mingle with many types, you can feel that you have helped him wisely. If you have watched for weak places in the field of his thought—such as his failure to use his mind in the performance of his small daily tasks—and if you have given him opportunity to make wise decisions until he has grown sure of his own good judgment in them you may be sure that you have gone far on the road toward teaching your child to think.

Fashions in tables have changed with the other types of furniture. The gateleg table is being supplanted by the drop-leaf table of the rubber type. The "console" table, of indeterminate parentage, is supplanted by a period table, the Duncan Phyfe drop-leaf being among the most popular, or the Duncan Phyfe sofa table. The small revolving book table is in favor as is the coffee table, especially the draw-top version, popular because it opens to larger size than the ordinary occasional table. Nests of small tables are still in general use, the most popular type being the glass-topped ones, or those of rectangular shape with simple inlay borders and plain, straight legs.

It is often difficult for mothers to decide how long to insist upon a daily nap. Should the revolt of the three-year-old be taken as the final word on the subject and as the indicator that nature refuses to take more than her real needs in the way of sleep? The usual advice is that the nap be continued longer than the third birthday, but the records show that during the fourth year lumberless families have found the advice impossible to follow. Here again individual differences must be observed, for some mothers know that easily exhausted, high-strung children of six or seven years cannot go through a day of hard play and work without a break for rest. This does not necessarily mean sleep. Rather more likely it is just an hour of quiet play or reading or looking at pictures, but it is a definitely observed break in the day's routine that is necessary to health and happiness.

Only ripe, thoroughly washed fruit is to be served raw to children. Over-ripe or under-ripe fruit should be cooked. Boys and girls under five years of age frequently are upset by the acidity and the harsh particles, such as seeds and tough skins, of fruits. Youngsters who cannot masticate foods well need to have hard fruits, such as pears and apples, pared and possibly scraped, and the berries strained of their seeds. Then cut the fruits, either the raw or stewed ones, into small pieces for serving.

There are raw materials that thoughtful mothers can keep on hand to meet the youngsters' needs as they arise in their play. Billy, his railroad track laid and train ready to run, suddenly wants signal flags. Sadly wants to "dress up" to ride in the train. Nothing is better than a box of pieces of colored cheesecloth or cumber. Children find innumerable uses for it. Before they learn to sew, they drape themselves and their dolls with pieces of cloth. A cupboard or trunk of cast-off clothes and hats will be welcomed as stage properties when children reach the dramatizing age. Colored tissue paper, twine, paste, paints (clothing dyes do nicely), crayons, large colored beads, and many other articles can be kept in a play cabinet and given out as required.

High Rank in History for the "Nothing-Buts"

To call the roll of nothing-buts summons an august assembly. There was Socrates, charged with many things, and yet he replied, "I am not a teacher nor yet a poet nor yet a rhetorician or lawyer or pleader or pretender to any superior learning. I am 'nothing but' a seeker after truth."

And St. Paul said, "This one thing I do," and went on to tell how he devoted his entire energies and life to proclaiming a message that he considered worthy of all his efforts. A great man that Paul; he might have been a university professor in Tarsus, "no mean city," or might have risen to a place of influence as a Roman citizen, establishing contacts between the Roman government and the Jewish people so difficult to govern. In that case he would have been forgotten with most of the men of his generation. But he joined the nothing-buts and became immortal.

And so might the list be lengthened with the names of all the great specialists of the world—Galileo and Luther and Newton and Columbus and Washington and hosts of others. And these all would have acknowledged themselves nothing in entire great spheres of knowledge and endeavor but—and in that but lay the fruits of concentration, of idealism, of devotion and perseverance. A noble order are those "nothing-buts."—Detroit News.

No Real Significance in "Average" Figuring

Averages are funny things. Here comes the National Confectioners' association with statistics to show that the average American spends two cents a day for candy. "If he buys 12 pounds a year he is average," it is said.

The above-mentioned average person, if he likes candy, spends considerably more than two cents a day on it, and eats far more than a dozen pounds a year. The man who does not care for sweets will buy none at all.

So the "average," although interesting, means nothing at all. Perhaps the best thing such figures do is to permit those with curious minds to make comparisons.

It is always intriguing to be told that the number of doughnuts eaten in the United States every year, if piled on top of each other, would reach to the moon and back five times.

One is reasonably sure that this spectacular piling feat would be impossible from every standpoint, but it pleases the imagination to picture that multiple pile of doughnuts.

Thus the American reader is deluged, year after year, with highly fanciful comparisons, spiced with great distances and impossible stunts. No one is harmed, and perhaps the art of statistics is helped.—Washington Star.

Law in a Democracy

"For that is what a law is in a democracy—a statute that the people will back up; indeed, in the long run, that is all a law is anywhere. The laws of a nation or community are the recorded customs of the people . . . and all the historic codes, the Mosaic code, the laws of Solon and Lycurgus, the codes of Justinian and Napoleon, the civil law, the English common law, and the legendary taboos of the savage tribes are but customs that have existed so long that they have crystallized into law . . . It is not the law that makes the custom, but the custom that makes the law, and when statutes run counter to custom they are impotent."—Brand Whitlock's "The Law of the Land," in the Atlantic Monthly.

A delighted look came over Mrs. Brown's face.

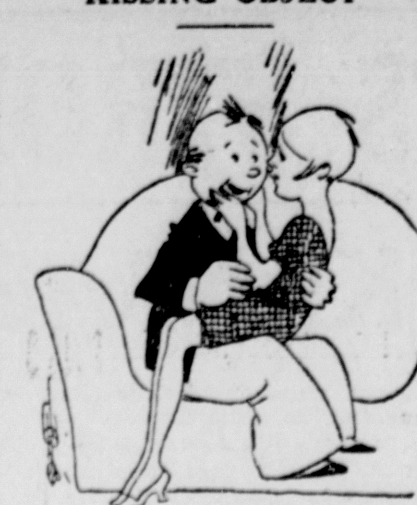

"Really! How interesting!" she remarked. "I wonder if you will let me have the brick? We're keeping all the little mementoes of his youthful pranks—they'll be so interesting when he grows up."

NEW MACHINE WILL FORETELL WEATHER

Forecasting Months Ahead Predicted by Expert.

Washington.—Accurate weather forecasts soon will be made months in advance through the use of machinery, Henry C. Clayton, Smithsonian institution meteorologist, predicts.

The weather is not a haphazard occurrence, but is subject to calculation, and this will lead to a revolution in the present methods of forecasting, he said, adding:

"The forecasting of pressure and temperature will be made in much the same way that ocean tides are predicted, except that the periods used will be solar periods rather than lunar periods and will need to be treated in a special way, owing to changes in phase and amplitude.

Sun Pulses Vary.
Processes will be simplified and machinery like tidal machines will be introduced to handle the immense amount of data which will be needed for world-wide forecasts, or even for forecasts over a large area like the United States."

It has been proved that complicated pulses of the sun's radiation occur both as long-period changes in the terms of years and also as shorter variations of only a few days' duration.

These pulses in the sun's radiation, according to Clayton, are attended by variations in atmospheric pressure, which increase the contrasts in pressure and speed up the circulation of the atmosphere.

When solar activity increases, the pressure falls in the equatorial region, rises in middle latitudes, and falls in the polar regions.

The regularity of these changes is interfered with by the distribution of land and water and by the seasonal changes, so that the rate of progression of the atmosphere waves is greatly complicated, he pointed out.

Periods Calculated.
Clayton's method of forecasting is by means of these period vibrations in the sun and atmosphere. Analysis of such period terms in the weather at any point on the earth would make it possible to project the period terms ahead to any length of time desired.

Since there are variations in the amplitude and phase of the periods, it is necessary to redetermine the periodic terms at short intervals and to limit the time in advance which they are made to cover, he explained.

Thus when these in the periodic term become calculable, this method of forecasting will replace all others, in Clayton's opinion.

London Star Has Mobile Press for Latest News

London.—Something new to Londoners in the way of fast delivery of late news to readers has been accomplished by the London evening newspaper, the Star, which is regularly operating a "Stop Press" printing establishment in its largest delivery van.

The equipment comprises a complete composing frame and type cases, and a suction-fed Bush printing machine capable of printing anything up to three thirty line news items at a speed up to 10,000 copies an hour.

News items are received by radio from the office of the Star and are set up and run off in the so-called blank "fudge column" as fast as they are received. The printing can be done as the van is rushing deliveries to the more distant suburbs, but it is more customary to install the van outside big horse race, football or other sports meetings, enabling the spectators at the meeting breaks up to buy London papers with the very latest news in them.

The van is also equipped with a special Marconiphone amplifier and two public address loud speakers through which broadcast microphone announcements can be made.

Lawrence Washington Check for $26.15 Found

Richmond, Va.—An old check bearing the signature of Lawrence Washington, who is believed to have been the last male member of the Washington family born at Mount Vernon on the Potomac, has been presented to the Virginia State library, it has been announced by Dr. Henry R. McIlwaine, the librarian. The check was brought to light recently when Mack Weekley, of Richmond, purchased a collection of old papers.

The check is dated September 10, 1861, and is drawn to the order of cash on the Farmers' bank of Virginia, then at Fredericksburg, Va., for the sum of $26.15. It is signed "Law Washington." The signature is believed to be that of Lawrence Washington, who was a grand nephew of George Washington.

Dogs Want Milk, Cow Objects, Dogs Bite Cow

Lynn, Mass.—Mrs. Lena Shapiro, owner of a milk farm in Saugas, today complained to Patrolman James P. Sullivan that one of her cows had been assaulted by two dogs. Investigation by the policeman revealed that the dogs were attempting to steal milk from the cow, that the cow objected by kicking the dogs and that the dogs retaliated by biting the cow.

The dogs were ordered by the Board of Health to be kept in leash for two weeks, the cow to be examined for traces of rabies.

ON REARING CHILDREN FROM CRIB TO COLLEGE

Compiled by the Editors of THE PARENTS' MAGAZINE

If you have taught your child not to make precipitate decisions, not to act on impulse, or to be guided entirely by his emotions, but to be thoughtful in money matters through the wise use of his allowance and to be careful in his judgments of people through a wide acquaintance and the opportunity to mingle with many types, you can feel that you have helped him wisely. If you have watched for weak places in the field of his thought—such as his failure to use his mind in the performance of his small daily tasks—and if you have given him opportunity to make wise decisions until he has grown sure of his own good judgment in them you may be sure that you have gone far on the road toward teaching your child to think.

Fashions in tables have changed with the other types of furniture. The gateleg table is being supplanted by the drop-leaf table of the ruder type. The "console" table, of indeterminate parentage, is supplanted by a period table, the Duncan Phyfe drop-leaf being among the most popular, or the Duncan Phyfe sofa table. The small revolving book table is in favor as is the coffee table, especially the draw-top version, popular because it opens to larger size than the ordinary occasional table. Nests of small tables are still in general use, the most popular type being the glass-topped ones, or those of rectangular shape with simple inlay borders and plain, straight legs.

It is often difficult for mothers to decide how long to insist upon a daily nap. Should the revolt of the three-year-old be taken as the final word on the subject and as the indicator that nature refuses to take more than her real needs in the way of sleep? The usual advice is that the nap be continued longer than the third birthday, but the records show that during the fourth year lumberless families have found the advice impossible to follow. Here again individual differences must be observed, for some mothers know that easily exhausted, high-strung children of six or seven years cannot go through a day of hard play and work without a break for rest. This does not necessarily mean sleep. Rather more likely it is just an hour of quiet play or reading or looking at pictures, but it is a definite observed break in the day's routine that is necessary to health and happiness.

Only ripe, thoroughly washed fruit is to be served raw to children. Over-ripe or under-ripe fruit should be cooked. Boys and girls under five years of age frequently are upset by the acidity and the harsh particles, such as seeds and tough skins, of fruits. Youngsters who cannot masticate foods well need to have hard fruits, such as pears and apples, pared and possibly scraped, and the berries strained of their seeds. Then cut the fruits, either the raw or stewed ones, into small pieces for serving.

There are raw materials that thoughtful mothers can keep on hand to meet the youngsters' needs as they arise in their play. Billy, his railroad track laid and train ready to run, suddenly wants signal flags. Sally wants to "dress up" to ride in the train. Nothing is better than a box of pieces of colored cheesecloth or cambric. Children find innumerable uses for it. Before they learn to sew, they drape themselves and their dolls with pieces of cloth. A cupboard or trunk of cast-off clothes and hats will be welcomed as stage properties when children reach the dramatizing age. Colored tissue paper, twine, paste, paints (clothing dyes do nicely), crayons, large colored beads, and many other articles can be kept in a play cabinet and given out as required.

High Rank in History for the "Nothing-Buts"

To call the roll of nothing-buts summons an august assembly. There was Socrates, charged with many things, and yet he replied, "I am not a teacher nor yet a poet nor yet a rhetorician or lawyer or pleader or pretender to any superior learning. I am 'nothing but' a seeker after truth."

And St. Paul said, "This one thing I do," and went on to tell how he devoted his entire energies and life to proclaiming a message that he considered worthy of all his efforts. A great man that Paul; he might have been a university professor in Tarsus, "no mean city," or might have risen to a place of influence as a Roman citizen, establishing contacts between the Roman government and the Jewish people so difficult to govern. In that case he would have been forgotten with most of the men of his generation. But he joined the nothing-buts and became immortal.

And so might the list be lengthened with the names of all the great specialists of the world—Galileo and Luther and Newton and Columbus and Washington and hosts of others. And these all would have acknowledged themselves nothing in entire great spheres of knowledge and endeavor—but in that but lay the fruits of concentration, of idealism, of devotion and perseverance. A noble order are those "nothing-buts."—Detroit News.

No Real Significance in "Average" Figuring

Averages are funny things. Here comes the National Confectioners' association with statistics to show that the average American spends two cents a day for candy. "If he buys 12 pounds a year he is 'average,'" it is said.

The above-mentioned average person, if he likes candy, spends considerably more than two cents a day on it, and eats far more than a dozen pounds a year. The man who does not care for sweets will buy none at all.

So the "average," although interesting, means nothing at all. Perhaps the best thing such figures do is to permit those with curious minds to make comparisons.

It is always intriguing to be told that the number of doughnuts eaten in the United States every year, if piled on top of each other, would reach to the moon and back five times.

One is reasonably sure that this spectacular piling feat would be impossible from every standpoint, but it pleases the imagination to picture that multiple pile of doughnuts.

Thus the American reader is deluged, year after year, with highly fanciful comparisons, spiced with great distances and impossible stunts. No one is harmed, and perhaps the art of statistics is helped.—Washington Star.

Law in a Democracy

"For that is what a law is in a democracy—a statute that the people will back up; indeed, in the long run, that is all a law is anywhere. The laws of a nation or community are the recorded customs of the people . . . and all the historic codes, the Mosaic code, the laws of Solon and Lycurgus, the codes of Justinian and Napoleon, the civil law, the English common law, and the legendary taboos of the savage tribes are but customs that have existed so long that they have crystallized into law . . . It is not the law that makes the custom, but the custom that makes the law, and when statutes run counter to custom they are impotent."—Brand Whitlock's "The Law of the Land," in The Atlantic Monthly.

A delighted look came over Mrs. Brown's face.

"Really! How interesting!" she remarked. "I wonder if you will let me have the brick? We're keeping all the little mementoes of his youthful pranks—they'll be so interesting when he grows up."

TOLLEFSEN TRIO DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

Appreciative Music Lovers Hear Sunday Afternoon Concert

HELD AT ELKS TEMPLE

Ensemble Performances Showed Accuracy, Unity and Tone Purity

A lovely Indian Summer Sunday, following Squaw Winter, was probably responsible for the small audience that greeted the Tollefsen Trio on Sunday afternoon, at Elks Temple.

But it was an audience that artists delight in—an audience that came because they wanted to hear good music. At the first notes of the first number, "Bolero," by Fernandez-Arbo, they settled back to enjoy themselves.

That they succeeded was evidenced by the enthusiastic applause that followed this number and every number for that matter. This first number showed the sure attack, the accuracy, the unity and tone purity which constitute a satisfactory ensemble performance.

In the Serenade by Saint-Saens, the cello lead off with the motif which was then taken up and repeated by the violin, the while the piano furnished a suitable but contrasting background of rolling arpeggios. In the Vivace from the trio Op. 72, by Godard, the piano had the leading part, which was full of singing runs and dainty trills skillfully executed. In fact, the piano part seemed to be an integral part of each number, not just an accompaniment.

The encore for this group was the charming Londonderry Air, arranged by Kreisler. During its performance, the audience seemed scarcely breathe. Even the Junior members sat as if enthralled.

The two cello solos by Robert Thrane that made up the second group, were enthusiastically received. The Spanish serenade was smooth and flowing, except for its two abrupt staccatos that surely were intended to awaken the serenaded lady. By contrast, the Tarantelle, by Popper, increased its tempo (as Tarantelles are supposed to do) until it became a mad dance. Then came a few measures of flowing melody in which each mellow tone seemed to fairly melt into the succeeding one. In the finale, the mad dance again, with its rapidly increasing tempo. The encore for this number was Saint-Saens' "The Swan."

In her piano solos, Augusta Schnabel Tollefsen combined power and tone beauty with a technical dexterity so expert that her playing seemed as easy and natural as breathing. "Serenade," by Schuman, was exultant, like the soaring of an eagle. "Arabesque," by Leschetizky, was a dainty and intricate piece of musical ornamentation, but the "Allegro Appassionata," by Saint-Saens, climaxed the group. Deep feeling was expressed in the underlying melody, but fiery passion over flowed in brilliant runs and trills.

The two violin numbers by Carl Tollefsen sounded very simple—"Romance," by Svendsen and Gypsy Songs, by a living Budapest composer Hubay. But the first proved to be a musical love story that was played with tender feeling and with the exquisite, melting tones possible only when a masterpiece of the violinist's art is in the hands of a master of that art of music. The violin used by Mr. Tollefsen is a rare old Guarnerius of the vintage of 1740. It has been used in concert by Ole Bull and Camilla Urso and suffers no dishonor by coming into the possession of Carl Tollefsen.

"Scenes de la Zardas" furnished a delightful and striking contrast to the love song, in their care-free rollicking abandon, and brought an insistent demand for an encore. Mr. Tollefsen responded with Kreisler's "Liebesfreud."

Before the closing trio "Theme and Variations," by Tchaikowski, Mr. Tollefsen gave the story of its creation advised by Rubinstein to write a trio. Tchaikowski was inspired to do so by the singing of folk-song by a young girl which charmed the two friends so much that they both stopped to listen. When taking one of their customary walks together. Using this as a motif, he began to write his trio. But before it was finished, his dear friend Reubenstein died. So he made the last movement a sort of In Memoriam. It expresses deep-felt, heart-breaking grief and closes with a dirge-like funeral march. The tragedy in this last movement is so keenly felt by the audience that applause seems out of place. Not until the players arose did the audience awake to the fact that they must express their appreciation in the usual way. Then they did so with enthusiasm, but the moment of silence was the greater tribute.

Seldom has an audience expressed such complete satisfaction with each and every number on a musical program as did this selected audience. Those who sacrificed a ride in the sun-shine felt well repaid, and those who came from Crosby-Tronton, Atkin and Walker were fortunate in being able to combine an outing with a rare musical treat.

TOLLEFSEN TRIO DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

Appreciative Music Lovers Hear Sunday Afternoon Concert

HELD AT ELKS TEMPLE

Ensemble Performances Showed Accuracy, Unity and Tone Purity

A lovely Indian Summer Sunday, following Squaw Winter, was probably responsible for the small audience that greeted the Tollefsen Trio on Sunday afternoon, at Elks Temple. But it was an audience that artists delight in—an audience that came because they wanted to hear good music.

At the first notes of the first number, "Bolero," by Fernandez-Arbo, they settled back to enjoy themselves. That they succeeded was evidenced by the enthusiastic applause that followed this number and every number for that matter. This first number showed the sure attack, the accuracy, the unity and tone purity which constitute a satisfactory ensemble performance.

In the Serenade by Saint-Saens, the cello lead off with the motif which was then taken up and repeated by the violin, the while the piano furnished a suitable but contrasting background of rolling arpeggios. In the Vivace from the trio Op. 72, by Godard, the piano had the leading part, which was full of rippling runs and dainty trills skillfully executed. In fact, the piano part seemed to be an integral part of each number, not just an accompaniment.

The encore for this group was the charming Londonderry Air, arranged by Kreisler. During its performance, the audience seemed scarcely breathe. Even the Junior members sat as if enthralled.

The two cello solos by Robert Thrane that made up the second group, were enthusiastically received. The Spanish serenade was smooth and flowing, except for its two abrupt staccatos that surely were intended to awaken the serenaded lady. By contrast, the Tarantelle, by Popper, increased its tempo (as Tarantelles are supposed to do) until it became a mad dance. Then came a few measures of flowing melody in which each mellow tone seemed to fairly melt into the succeeding one. In the finale, the mad dance again, with its rapidly increasing tempo. The encore for this number was Saint-Saens' "The Swan."

In her piano solos, Augusta Schnabel Tollefsen combined power and tone beauty with a technical dexterity so expert that her playing seemed as easy and natural as breathing. "Soaring" by Schuman, was exultant, like the soaring of an eagle. "Arabesque," by Leschetizky, was a dainty and intricate piece of musical ornamentation, but the "Allegro Appassionato," by Saint-Saens, climaxed the group. Deep feeling was expressed in the underlying melody, but fiery passion over flowed in brilliant runs and trills.

The two violin numbers by Carl Tollefsen sounded very simple—"Romance," by Svendsen and Gypsy Scenes, by a living, Budapest composer Hubay. But the first proved to be a musical love story that was played with tender feeling and with the exquisite, melting tones possible only when a masterpiece of the violinist's art is in the hands of a master of that art of music. The violin used by Mr. Tollefsen is a rare old Guarnerius of the vintage of 1740. It has been used in concert by Ole Bull and Camilla Urso and suffers no dishonor by coming into the possession of Carl Tollefsen.

"Scenes de la Czardas" furnished a delightful and striking contrast to the love song, in their care-free rollicking abandon, and brought an insistent demand for an encore. Mr. Tollefsen responded with Kreisler's "Liebesfreud." Before the closing trio "Theme and Variations," by Tchaikowski, Mr. Tollefsen gave the story of its creation advised by Rubinstein to write a trio. Tchaikowski was inspired to do so by the singing of folk-song by a young girl which charmed the two friends so much that they both stopped to listen, when taking one of their customary walks together. Using this as a motif, he began to write his trio. But before it was finished, his dear friend Reubenstein died. So he made the last movement a sort of In Memoriam. It expresses deep-felt, heart-breaking grief and closes with a dirge-like funeral march. The tragedy in this last movement is so keenly felt by the audience that applause seems out of place. Not until the players arose did the audience awake to the fact that they must express their appreciation in the usual way. Then they did so with enthusiasm, but the moment of silence was the greater tribute.

Seldom has an audience expressed such complete satisfaction with each and every number on a musical program as did this selected audience. Those who sacrificed a ride in the sunshine felt well repaid, and those who came from Crosby-Interton, Aitkin and Walker were fortunate in being able to combine an outing with a rare musical treat.

JUDY

Winifred
Van Duzer

JUDITH ARCHER, young school teacher is aboard ship on a well-earned vacation. Her mother, whom she supports, meets a Mr. Tennant. Judy, realizing she is unattractive is lonely. Her prejudice against men weakens when she receives attention from Kit Camp, ship's radio operator.

CHAPTER VII.

THE air was champagne and crystal and the wind was a chuckle which whipped the scarf to orange streamers behind Judy's head and reddened her cheeks. She ran along the deck to the bow, stood there, laughing, a graceful, vivid little figure.

She was so exultant that she did not see a tall man who watched a while before he stepped up in a lazy way, turned his back to the rail so he faced her instead of the sea.

"Hullo, there—"
Judy's look came jerking around. Away from the cloth of silver ocean to the glints in his green eyes, the half-inquiring, half-delighted grin that swept her up and down.

She had meant to forget Kit Camp, to be very cold and distant if ever he spoke. But now she found herself grinning back and blushing.

"I say—didn't mean to frighten you. Aren't you the girl that came to see Captain Marceau? I'm the sleepy-head he threw out—fellow he called 'Sparks'."

"You do remember me then?"
"Remember you?" Rather! You're watching to see who puts the salt in the sea? Something very young, very winsome about his chuckle and his precise accent. For perhaps the first time in her contact with men Judy did not rear a defense—turn reserved and suspicious—and so he went on grinning at her as if they shared some delightful secret.

"You've been going to sea a long time?" she asked finally. "It must be wonderful—all change and adventure."

He looked out over the sea, the glints in his eyes. A self-possessed young man. He would know what he wanted and fight till he got it. And he did not seem like one who would hunt rainbow ends. "Adventure? I suppose so—hadn't thought of that. Things look about the same in time. Had a lot of experiences. Left home when I was 18. That's 8 years ago."

He was 26. Yet he looked younger. He looked like an urchin somehow grown tall and broad. He would be over 6 feet and his shoulders were a football player's. His features were clean cut and proud. "You'd like him even if he is a man?" tumbled into Judy's thought.

"Went to New Zealand first," he rambled along. "There's a little jaunt to New Zealand. But I didn't like it. Then I tried Australia. The States are best."

"You've spent time in America?" Judy kept comparing the color of his eyes with the green of the sea, where it rolled in the shadow under the port rail. His skin was an odd tint, too; not quite bronze. It made you think of jade reflections in old ivory. She smiled at the fancy and he flashed his grin.

"America—oh, rather. Fancy New England, y'know—Connecticut. It's a little like home, you see. One day I shall settle down there when I've had enough of this."

"Enough of the sea? But how could you?"

He shook his head. "Fellow wants to settle down sometime. Have a cottage. And a garden." His gaze was on the horizon where a shadow like a dim blot of ink on a silver paper was a ship in the endlessness of sea and sky. And Judy tried to pull her thoughts together. She was not sure now that she liked him. Thinking of wanting a cottage and garden when world trails were his—the seven seas—Northern lights and the Southern Cross! Something curious about him.

She was so exultant that she did not see a tall man who watched a while before he stepped up in a lazy way.

She hoped with a little sense of panic that he would not set all her lovely dreams crashing.

Kit Camp took his elbows from the rail, stretched his arms lazily, said he must go below. "We're working in six hour shifts, other operator and myself. I went on at midnight. It's a dull trick."

"But I don't see—why, with all the things you can listen to—going through the air! I've thought of this," Judy cried. "Talk floating in the air—over land and sea. People saying things to each other. Telling their secrets—tragedy and triumph—everything. It would be like getting inside their minds, listening to them think!"

He inquired in a practical way "What would you want to listen for?" And he looked so puzzled that she could only shake her head. "You're disappointing," she thought. "Romany Rye without a song." But aloud she said, "Hope we'll meet again. I'd love to hear some of those experiences."

"But I say, we couldn't help meeting aboard." A flash of the grin, a wave of his cap and he sauntered off, shoulders back against the wind.

Judy was depressed. "Practical sort of a person. Wants a cottage and a garden—and I thought him so glamorous! You just can't tell what folks are like!"

Yet she couldn't get him out of her mind—his boyishness, the up-curve of his lips when he smiled; his poised suaveness. One thing certain; she never had met anyone like him in the least.

Peggy was getting up, moaning that she was not as young as she had been, that she feared the salt air would roughen her face and then what would she look like?

"Like a small, untidy angel, dear. And now if you'll rush a little, I'm starved!"

"And where have you been? I declare you're pretty as can be—oh, beautiful—with your hair all mussed and that orange scarf. . . You must keep the scarf, Judy; it's your type. I'll be ready time you're dressed."

DAIRY FACTS

BALANCED RATION
NEEDED BY COWS

Animal Must Be Supplied
Right Amount of Feed.

The claim that any proprietary feed is a scientifically balanced ration is absurd. A balanced ration is one which supplies the animal with exactly the right amount of food and in which the different classes of nutrients are supplied in the proportions in which they are needed by the animal. Before a grain mixture can intelligently be prescribed which will supply even an approximation of a balanced ration to a dairy cow, the amount and character of the available roughage (hay, pasture, stover, silage, etc.) must be known; also the approximate production of the animal. A grain mixture balanced for feeding with clover or alfalfa hay and silage would no longer be balanced if the legume hay were replaced by timothy, or if the silage were discontinued. When it is realized that a 1,000-pound cow producing 20 pounds of average milk requires three times as much protein and twice as much total food material as she would need when dry or that when producing 40 pounds, her requirement would be five times as much protein and three times as much total food; or that when producing 60 pounds of average milk, her requirement would be seven times as much protein and four times as much total food as she would need when dry, the importance of production as a factor in balancing rations can be readily understood. The preceding brief statement will also serve to show that the heavy producing cow must have a much higher proportion of protein in her food than the lighter producer. A ration which is balanced for the light producer would be entirely inadequate and out of balance for the heavy producer, while one that was balanced for the latter would be out of balance and wasteful, especially of protein if fed even in reduced amount to a light producer or a dry cow.

Overfeeding Dairy Cows
May Bring on Sterility

There is a tendency on some dairy farms to feed too much high protein grain to dairy cows, with the result that they have to be sent to the butcher within two or three years because of udder trouble or failure to breed. If such practices meant increased profits, dairymen would be justified in following them; but such is not the case. There is too much money spent for grain, too little attention paid to the raising of the right kind of hay, and too heavy depreciation on the cows.

The average lifetime of the cows in a herd should be five years, or five milking periods. When cows are fed properly they will calf every year, if there is no abortion in the herd, and produce well year after year. In other words, we will get the most milk from a herd of cows over a period of five years when the amount of grain fed is not too heavy, and when the grain ration fits the roughage fed. If we want a cow to stay in our herd any length of time, we must be careful not to overfeed her.

Strippings Are Richer
Than Entire Milking

It is known that the strippings from a cow are richer than the entire milking. The difference is found to be in the fat only, the remainder of the milk remains the same. Seven cows tested by the writer averaged 1.8 fat in the first milk and 6.2 per cent in the last draw.

The variation from the first to the last is more with the heavily milking cow than one producing but a small amount. The practical value of these facts is to make clear the importance of getting the strippings in order to have the highest testing milk. The last pint is equal to the first two quarts in fat content.—C. H. Eckles.

Pasture Required for Dairy Cow During Year

Under the method of pasture management still in general use, it requires two to two and one-half acres of pasture for each dairy cow or fattening steer, and even then in the case of dairy cows the pasture must be heavily supplemented by mill feeds and concentrates. During the past few years many experiments were conducted with a view to finding a remedy for this condition, and now a system has been evolved which offers great advantages to the dairyman as well as to the farmer who specializes in beef cattle and sheep.

Shelter for Calves

Calves should have a warm shed to "keep the hump out of their backs" this winter, according to C. W. McDonald of Iowa state college at Ames. Such care will prevent colds, lung fever and scours. A well bedded open south shed will provide the protection at a minimum of cost. A ration of grain and good legume roughage will furnish the necessary feed for growth and put the calf into condition for spring pasture or for the feedlot as the case may be.

JOE

Winifred Van Duzer

JUDITH ARCHER, young school teacher is aboard ship on a well-earned vacation. Her mother, whom she supports, meets a Mr. Tennant. Judy, realizing she is unattractive is lonely. Her prejudice against men weakens when she receives attention from Kit Camp, ship's radio operator.

CHAPTER VII.

THE air was champagne and crystal and the wind was a chuckle which whipped the scarf to orange streamers behind Judy's head and reddened her cheeks. She ran along the deck to the bow, stood there, laughing, a graceful, vivid little figure.

She was so exultant that she did not see a tall man who watched a while before he stepped up in a lazy way, turned his back to the rail so he faced her instead of the sea.

"Hullo, there—" Judy's look came jerking around. Away from the cloth of silver ocean to the glints in his green eyes, the half-inquiring, half-delighted grin that swept her up and down.

She had meant to forget Kit Camp, to be very cold and distant if ever he spoke. But now she found herself grinning back and blushing.

"I say—didn't mean to frighten you. Aren't you the girl that came to see Captain Marceau? I'm the sleepy-head he threw out—fellow he called 'Sparks'."

"You do remember me then?"

"Remember you! Rather! You're watching to see who puts the salt in the sea?" Something very young, very winsome about his chuckle and his precise accent. For perhaps the first time in her contact with men Judy did not rear a defense—turn reserved and suspicious—and so he went on grinning at her as if they shared some delightful secret.

"You've been going to sea a long time?" she asked finally. "It must be wonderful—all change and adventure."

He looked over the sea, the glints in his eyes. A self-possessed young man. He would know what he wanted and fight till he got it. And he did not seem like one who would hunt rainbow ends.

"Adventure? I suppose so—hadn't thought of that. Things had about the same in time. Had a lot of experiences. Left home when I was 18. That's 8 years ago."

He was 26. Yet he looked younger. He looked like an urchin somehow grown tall and broad. He would be over 6 feet and his shoulders were a football player's. His features were clean cut and proud. "You'd like him even if he is a man!" tumbled into Judy's thought.

"Went to New Zealand first," he rambled along. "There's a little jaunt to New Zealand. But I didn't like it. Then I tried Australia. The States are best."

"You've spent time in America?" Judy kept comparing the color of his eyes with the green of the sea, where it rolled in the shadow under the port rail. His skin was an odd tint, too; not quite bronze. It made you think of jade reflections in old ivory. She smiled at the fancy and he flashed his grin.

"America—oh, rather. Fancy New England, y'know—Connecticut. It's a little like home, you see. One day I shall settle down there when I've had enough of this."

"Enough of the sea? But how could you?"

He shook his head. "Fellow wants to settle down sometime. Have a cottage. And a garden." His gaze was on the horizon where a shadow like a dim blot of ink on a silver paper was a ship in the endlessness of sea and sky.

And Judy tried to pull her thoughts together. She was not sure now that she liked him. Thinking of wanting a cottage and garden when world trails were his—the seven seas—Northern lights and the Southern Cross! Something curious about him.

She was so exultant that she did not see a tall man who watched a while before he stepped up in a lazy way.

She hoped with a little sense of panic that he would not set all her lovely dreams crashing.

Kit Camp took his elbows from the rail, stretched his arms lazily, said he must go below. "We're working in six hour shifts, other operator and myself. I went on at midnight. It's a dull trick."

"But I don't see—why, with all the things you can listen to—going through the air! I've thought of this," Judy cried. "Talk floating in the air—over land and sea. People saying things to each other. Telling their secrets—tragedy and triumph—everything. It would be like getting inside their minds, listening to them think!"

He inquired in a practical way "What would you want to listen for?" And he looked so puzzled that she could only shake her head. "You're disappointing," she thought. "Romany Rye without a song." But aloud she said, "Hope we'll meet again. I'd love to hear some of those experiences."

"But I say, we couldn't help meeting aboard." A flash of the grin, a wave of his cap and he sauntered off, shoulders back against the wind.

Judy was depressed. "Practical sort of a person. Wants a cottage and a garden—and I thought him so glamorous! You just can't tell what folks are like."

Yet she couldn't get him out of her mind—his boyishness, the up-curve of his lips when he smiled; his poised sureness. One thing certain; she never had met anyone like him in the least.

Peggy was getting up, moaning that she was not as young as she had been, that she feared the salt air would roughen her face and then what would she look like?

"Like a small, untidy angel, dear. And now if you'll rush a little. I'm starved!"

"And where have you been? I declare you're pretty as can be—oh, beautiful—with your hair all mussed and that orange scarf. . . . You must keep the scarf, Judy; it's your type. I'll be ready time you're dressed."

"To Be Continued Tomorrow."

DAIRY FACTS

BALANCED RATION NEEDED BY COWS

Animal Must Be Supplied Right Amount of Feed.

The claim that any proprietary feed is a scientifically balanced ration is absurd. A balanced ration is one which supplies the animal with exactly the right amount of food and in which the different classes of nutrients are supplied in the proportions in which they are needed by the animal. Before a grain mixture can intelligently be prescribed which will supply even an approximation of a balanced ration to a dairy cow, the amount and character of the available roughage (hay, pasture, stover, silage, etc.) must be known; also the approximate production of the animal. A grain mixture balanced for feeding with clover or alfalfa hay and silage would no longer be balanced if the legume hay were replaced by timothy, or if the silage were discontinued.

When it is realized that a 1,000-pound cow producing 20 pounds of average milk requires three times as much protein and twice as much total food material as she would need when dry or that when producing 40 pounds, her requirement would be five times as much protein and three times as much total food; or that when producing 60 pounds of average milk, her requirement would be seven times as much protein and four times as much total food as she would need when dry, the importance of production as a factor in balancing rations can be readily understood. The preceding brief statement will also serve to show that the heavy producing cow must have a much higher proportion of protein in her food than the lighter producer. A ration which is balanced for the light producer would be entirely inadequate and out of balance for the heavy producer, while one that was balanced for the latter would be out of balance and wasteful, especially of protein if fed even in reduced amount to a light producer or a dry cow.

Overfeeding Dairy Cows May Bring on Sterility

There is a tendency on some dairy farms to feed too much high protein grain to dairy cows, with the result that they have to be sent to the butcher within two or three years because of under trouble or failure to breed. If such practices meant increased profits, dairymen would be justified in following them; but such is not the case. There is too much money spent for grain, too little attention paid to the raising of the right kind of hay, and too heavy depreciation on the cows.

The average lifetime of the cows in a herd should be five years, or five milking periods. When cows are fed properly they will calf every year, if there is no abortion in the herd, and produce well year after year. In other words, we will get the most milk from a herd of cows over a period of five years when the amount of grain fed is not too heavy, and when the grain ration fits the roughage fed. If we want a cow to stay in our herd any length of time, we must be careful not to overfeed her.

Strippings Are Richer Than Entire Milking

It is known that the strippings from a cow are richer than the entire milking. The difference is found to be in the fat only, the remainder of the milk remains the same. Seven cows tested by the writer averaged 1.8 fat in the first milk and 6.2 per cent in the last draw.

The variation from the first to the last is more with the heavily milking cow than one producing but a small amount. The practical value of these facts is to make clear the importance of getting the strippings in order to have the highest testing milk. The last pint is equal to the first two quarts in fat content.—C. H. Eckles.

Pasture Required for Dairy Cow During Year

Under the method of pasture management still in general use, it requires two to two and one-half acres of pasture for each dairy cow or fattening steer, and even then in the case of dairy cows the pasture must be heavily supplemented by mill feeds and concentrates. During the past few years many experiments were conducted with a view to finding a remedy for this condition, and now a system has been evolved which offers great advantages to the dairyman as well as to the farmer who specializes in beef cattle and sheep.

Shelter for Calves

Calves should have a warm shed to "keep the hump out of their backs" this winter, according to C. W. McDonald of Iowa state college at Ames. Such care will prevent colds, lung fever and scours. A well bedded open south shed will provide the protection at a minimum of cost. A ration of grain and good legume roughage will furnish the necessary feed for growth and put the calf into condition for spring pasture or for the feedlot as the case may be.
